Firebomb 14

VANCOUVER (CP) - Seven persons escaped injury early today when a Molotov cocktail exploded in a central Vancouver house.

It was the 14th firebomb attack here in recent weeks, but the first against a residence.

Inside the home were a mother, her three children and three tenants.

FIERCE THREE-DAY BATTLE

Viets Fight in China

Times News Services

Vietnam has struck back at China, sending forces 24 kilometres deep into Chinese territory, but the attack has been repulsed, the official Chinese Hsinhua News Agency reported today.

The news agency said Chinese and Vietnamese forces fought for three days in the Ninming area of the Kwangsi Chuan autonomous region and the Chinese killed 68 Vietnamese troops and captured one.

This is the first time China has reported Vietnamese intrusions into its border provinces since Feb 17 when it launched its attacks into Vietnam.

The attack began last Friday when a battalion of Vietnamese troops attacked communes in Ningming, firing more than 200 shells, the agency said.

The Vietnamese burnt two villages and a large area of forestland, killing many Chinese civilians and damaging houses, the agency added.

At the height of the offensive, the Vietnamese occupied a six-kilometre stretch of highway and a hill, the agency said.

Earlier, Peking sources said the invading Chinese forces were under orders not to advance more than 50 kilometres from the border. They said fighting is being staged within a 20 kilometre radius from the frontier.

Chinese and Vietnamese forces also fought slogging battles across three northern mountain provinces today in stepped-up clashes. China claimed 17,000 Vietnamese casualties in the war, and said it had knocked out seven missile bases.

The Japanese news agency Kyodo reporting from Peking said China claimed it had disabled or destroyed seven missile bases.

Kyodo quoted official documents saying "several thousand" Vietnamese prisoners of war — the first China has reported taking — have been taken into Chinese territory.

The battles are now "heavier than before with large numbers of troops apparently involved on both ... sides," a U.S. State Department spokesman said in Washington Monday.

The spokesman said the Vietnamese "appear to be reinforcing units in the

Vandal Rash in City

Thieves and vandals hit nearly a dozen businesses in Victoria overnight and while little was taken, damage is reckoned in the thousands of dollars.

Plants and bushes were uprooted in the lobby of a building at 747 Fort and across the alley at 734 Broughton doors were smashed, desks opened and a safe damaged.

There were also break-ins at McGill and Orme at Fort and Richmond, Le Premier Restaurant at 506 Fort and Corner Confectionery at 501 Government.

Dave Patterson, office manager of the law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm, owners of the Broughton Street building, estimates about $3,000 damage was done to office furnishings.

He said thieves apparently picked the lock in the front door and then made their way through the first two floors of the building, entering the offices of Midland Dougherty, Monarch Life, Investor's Syndicate and several lawyers' offices.

"They hit every office in the building, except those on the third floor. They couldn't get to them because the elevator was locked," Patterson said.

Nothing, however, appeared to be taken.

"I think they were looking for cash only," he said. "But nothing of value is ever kept overnight in the building."

He said an unsuccessful attempt was made to jimmy open a safe in the back of Investor's Syndicate.

Police said the thieves went empty-handed in the other break-ins as well.

GNP Rose By 3.4% In 1978

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian economy grew by 3.4 per cent in 1978, up slightly from 2.7 per-cent growth in 1977, Statistics Canada reported today.

The federal agency said Gross National Product (GNP), the value of all goods and services produced in the country, rose to $231.8 billion.

That was 10.3 per cent higher than in 1977 but real growth, after taking into account inflation, was only 3.4 per cent.

Although the GNP increase was higher than in 1977, it fell well short of Finance Minister Jean Chretien's prediction.

Statistics Canada said about half the increase in the country's total production was the result of an 8.5-per-cent real increase in exports, which "had a positive effect on profits and employment in export-oriented industries."

The effect of improved exports, however, was offset by a 4.1-per-cent increase in the volume of imports which rose despite an increase of 12.7 per cent in import prices.

Statistics Canada said real growth in the fourth quarter was at a sluggish annual rate of 1.8 per cent.

Begin Snub Puts Summit on Ice

Times News Services

The White House today expressed "grave concern" over Israel's decision not to send Prime Minister Menachem Begin to a Mideast summit meeting scheduled at Camp David this week.

The refusal of both Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to meet at the request of President Carter means there will be no such "summit."

Although Carter had no immediate personal comment, White House officials were obviously concerned about the effect on peace prospects in the Middle East.

"We're in the process of making sure we fully understand what has taken place," said a White House official, noting that Begin had promised to communicate with Carter on the move.

"The initial reaction here was of grave concern about what this decision means to the peace process," the official said.

The Israeli cabinet overwhelmingly decided to reject Carter's invitation because of a hardening of Egypt's position in the peace talks.

But Begin said he would be willing at any time to meet with Carter concerning relations between the United States and Israel.

Begin said it was evident to the cabinet that in the five days of minsterial level talks in Washington "no progress was made toward an Israeli-Egyptian agreement. On the contrary, a more extreme position was presented by the Egyptian delegation."

The cabinet voted 14-2 to reject the invitation temporarily because "it would be inappropriate for Begin to take part in the talks under the current conditions," the sources said.

The sources said the cabinet ministers were upset that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was not to participate in the meeting.

The cabinet decision was certain to anger Carter, who reportedly planned to convene the summit with Begin and Egyptian prime minister Mustapha Khalil as early as Thursday.

Begin said Khalil insisted on the adoption of the Egyptian proposals.

"Under these circumstances, the cabinet decided that the prime minister is not in a position to participate in the proposed meeting with Dr. Khalil," Begin said in a prepared statement.

But the cabinet left an opening for Begin to go to Washington immediately, if necessary, if Carter wanted to see him about its decision.

"The prime minister is prepared at any time convenient to President Carter to leave for the United States to meet with the president to discuss matters related to the peace-making process, original issues in the context of recent developments and questions concerning the bilateral relations between the United States and Israel," Begin said.

He declined to answer reporters' questions.

The stunning Israeli decision came during a five-hour cabinet session.

Carter Asks Power To Ration Gasoline

Times News Services

President Carter has asked Congress for authority to order coupon-type gasoline rationing and three other mandatory conservation measures for use in severe energy emergencies, the Energy Department said today.

In addition to rationing of the kind last used during the Second World War, Carter's proposed standby measures to force fuel savings include weekend service station closings, temperature limits for public buildings and a ban on nonessential advertising lights and lighted store window displays.

Imposing all the steps short of rationing would save more than 500,000 barrels of oil a day, department analysts said.

Carter sent copies of his request to key members of Congress Monday but delayed public announcement of details until today to assure lawmakers got the first word. Formal transmission of the requests was scheduled for March 1, the first day both the House and Senate will be in session.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia announced today it will not raise oil prices during the first quarter of this year.

The Saudi announcement came one day after Kuwait told customers it was adding nine per cent to its current price of $13.35 a barrel, raising it to about $14.55 a barrel.

In Kuwait, U.S. warnings that it will use military force in the Persian Gulf region if necessary to protect Middle East oil supplies have provoked angry reaction.

Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah said he resents the statements, made Sunday by Defence Secretary Harold Brown and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

Hassan Nazih, the new director of the Iranian National Iranian Oil Co., said at a news conference today that Iran will sell its first exported oil next week on the spot market to the highest bidder and hopes to get $18 to $20 a barrel.

This would be $4.65 to $6.65 more than the current base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

"At this moment, there are several foreign tankers in Iranian waters ready to take on oil," said Nazih. "These are expected to dock within a few days."

The Saudi announcement also called for an urgent meeting of oil exporters and consumers "to regulate consumption and stabilize oil prices, to save the world from a possible economic relapse."

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter and traditionally has been a moderate in pricing decisions of OPEC.

Venezuela also has announced a price increase for several types of oil used primarily for powering factories and electrical generators, an increase that might mean a five-cent-a-gallon rise in the price.

ICBC PROFIT 'REALLY A LOSS'

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. would end the year with a loss of $15 million rather than a surplus of $22 million if the government subsidy was included in the final figures, an NDP MLA said today.

Dennis Cocke, the party's ICBC critic, said ICBC president Robbie Sherrell is earning his $80,000 annual salary by totalling confusing everyone with his projected profits.

Sherrell said Monday that ICBC had revenues of $366 million and paid out $344 million in claims and costs for a net surplus of $22 million.

Sherrell said the figures represent a turn around from last year's $8 million deficit.

But Cocke said the true revenues are $366 million in premiums plus $40 million in investment income (largely from the half billion dollars in claims reserves) for a total income of $406 million.

Expenditures include the $343 million in claims plus another $60 million in administrative costs.

This would result in the corporation ending the year $3 million in the black, but Cocke said the government is subsidizing ICBC by $18 million so the true overall loss would be $15 million this year.

Cocke was referring to the $181 million that the government gave ICBC three years ago.

But the next day ICBC loaned the money back to the provincial treasury at an interest rate of 10 per cent.

Since the taxpayer is paying that interest — $18 million per year — to ICBC that sum must be included in calculating ICBC profits or losses, Cocke said.

Steaks-to-Steel Price Probe Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — A special commission to investigate price increases for everything from steaks to steel and to order reductions in unjustified charges is needed to prevent even higher inflation rates, Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader said Monday.

He told reporters he would propose a Fair Prices Commission in a special Commons debate today. The commission would have few bureaucrats and would concentrate on keeping price changes in line with wages.

If price increases were not moderated, workers would start demanding higher contract settlements, he said.

Earlier in the Commons, Broadbent was assured by Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand that the government will investigate why flour prices have shot above levels expected when the government ended a bread subsidy at the end of 1978.

The NDP has asked the government to justify increases in many food prices. And it has asked it to look into rising costs of steel and lumber which are adding to the price of new houses.

Allmand said there was little Ottawa could do now that the Anti-Inflation Board was on the wane but that he would investigate.

At the same time, he accused Broadbent of asking questions on obscure topics and "aiming questions not for information but for emotion."

"Any fool can get up and ask a question in this House," Allmand said. It was harder to analyze the circumstances behind price rises.

Broadbent replied that it "would take a particular fool to give that answer." The minister should be honest with the public and admit "the government has no intention of doing anything about food prices."

That, Allmand said, was another facile suggestion.

Government agencies reported bullish food price increases of 21 per cent in 1978. Beef price increases started a stampede in other meat prices. The devalued dollar also pushed up the cost of imported fruit and vegetables. Food prices rose 1.9 per cent in January.

Broadbent said the government should also investigate why retail chicken prices have climbed 35 per cent in the last year while returns to farmers for birds have gone up only 12.5 per cent. It appeared to be classic case of middlemen profiteering at the expense of farmer and consumer.

Allmand said the national marketing boards for chickens and turkeys are expected to increase production to help ease price increases. But Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said there now is more poultry available than there was at the start of 1978.

Begin Snub Kills Summit

Ezer Weizman voted in favor of Begin's attending the summit, the sources said. They said Dayan argued that Begin should attend.

A dispute over protocol and angry charges by some Israeli leaders that Begin was being snubbed had compounded the confusion over a remark reportedly made by Khalil who was quoted as saying in London Monday that a tentative agreement on a peace treaty already had been reached.

In Washington, Carter aides were busy reinstating the president's original plans to travel to Los Angeles on Friday for a round of predominantly political activities, including an address to a Democratic fundraising dinner Friday night.

Carter has been losing ground among key past Democratic supporters in California. He had planned to ask Vice-President Walter Mondale to stand in for him in California had the summit meeting taken place.

There was no immediate word on whether Carter would extend an invitation to the Israeli leader to visit Washington for a face-to-face meeting.

north," a rugged, overgrown area where the war is centered along mountain roads that have been pounded by artillery.

The United States today, meanwhile, urged China to withdraw its invasion forces from Vietnam but China said it would not pull back unless Vietnam negotiates a ceasefire.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal met for 90 minutes with Chinese vice-premier Teng Hsiao-ping in Peking and afterwards told reporters: "I conveyed the position of the United States with respect to China's move into Vietnam and indicated our opposition to that move and our hope there will be a speedy withdrawal."

Asked whether this was the message Carter directed him to deliver to the Chinese, Blumenthal said, "Yes." He assessed his meeting with Teng as "very good and thorough."

The Soviet Union's top Southeast Asian affairs official arrived in Hanoi and met Monday with Vietnamese Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs, the official Vietnam News Agency, monitored in Bangkok, said.

The agency said A.I. Rogachev, director of the southeast Asia department of the Soviet Foreign Ministry and Phan Hien "discussed problems of common concern."

Soviet technicians in Quang Ninh Province bordering China have pledged to help the Vietnamese defense forces, VNA reported.

The report said the Russian techical advisers "energetically condemned the Chinese authorities for carrying out a war of aggression against Vietnam, and demanded the immediate cessation of this dirty war."

An 11-ship Soviet fleet cruised in the South China Sea off Vietnam and three more ships off the Chinese coast. U.S. ships have also been on the move. Six U.S. Navy vessels including a nuclear submarine and a battle cruiser have been moved into Hong Kong Harbor and the aircraft carrier USS Constellation steamed out into the South China Sea from the Philippines with about 100 warplanes aboard.

A U.S. Navy sokesman spokesman in Hong Kong denied the Constellation's departure for the South China Sea was connected with the Soviet naval buildup in the area. He said the carrier would rendezvous at sea with its normal complement of destroyers.

In a related development, Vietnamese leaders say they might accept a Cambodian government led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Congresswoman Elizabeth Holtzman said Monday after returning from Vietnam.

High Vietnamese government officials told her "they did not close the door to a deal that would bring Prince Sihanouk back to Cambodia," she said without identifying the officials.

China Buys Wheat

OTTAWA (CP) — China has agreed to buy up to 10.5 million tonnes of Canadian wheat in a new, three-year contract.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, and visiting Chinese agricultural officials announced Monday the agreement which provides for a minimum of 8.4 million tonnes of Canadian wheat and a maximum of 10.5 million tonnes. The agreement takes effect Aug. 1 this year.

Lang said the agreement could be worth up to $1.5 billion to Western farmers in the next three years. Deliveries will begin Aug. 1.

China has been Canada's largest regular wheat customer since 1961. Lang said the agreement was made possible by Canadian government-guaranteed credit which calls for 25 per cent cash when each vessel is loaded and the balance in 18 months.

He said the contract will not produce a great increase in the annual flow of Canadian wheat to China but does provide stability and "certainty in terms of planning" through the long-term agreement. One-year contracts have been in place for the last few years.

Lang said the minimum China has agreed to buy, 8.4 million tonnes, is greater than sales during previous long-term agreements.

The wheat board and the Chinese corporation will negotiate the quantities and types of wheat although No. 2 and No. 3 grades are usually what China buys.

CP Air Announces Cuts In Charter Fares to U.K.

Times News Services

CP Air made another move in its price war with Air Canada on Monday by announcing it will cut by $30 prices of charter flights to London, Prestwick and Manchester.

The new fares are to apply between May and October.

Dal O'Toole, charter division general manager, said the new fares on advanced booking charters would range from $439 to $539 for a Vancouver-London return flight and from $419 to $519 for Vancouver-Prestwick.

Those fares, he said, are the lowest available between those points while fares ranging from $454 to $554 for a Vancouver-Manchester return flight match the lowest rates available on that route.

The price war heated up last week when Air Canada announced it would cut fares for flights between North American points with the exception of Florida by between 40 and 68 per cent during a seven-week period this spring.

After announcing it would match those fares, CP Air Monday filed an official complaint with the Canadian transport commission in Ottawa, arguing the price cuts by the national carrier would harm regional carriers like CP Air.

Meanwhile, the licences of two airlines, including CP Air, have been suspended for brief periods for advertising charter flights which had not been approved by the Canadian transport commission.

The commission announced Monday that Wardair Canada (1975) Ltd., the country's largest charter carrier, will be prohibited from operating advance booking charter flights from April 16 to April 22. Two flights are affected.

Max Ward, president of the airline, said the ruling will be ignored pending an appeal to Transport Minister Otto Lang.

The commission also suspended the charter operations of CP Air on May 4, also affecting two flights between Canada and Britain.

The suspensions of Wardair and CP Air concern advertising in January of charters to Britain before approval was given by the commission.

CP Air said a brochure advertising a charter program was intended to inform travel agents, not passengers, but the commission said one passenger did book a seat after seeing it.

Nordair Ltd. of Montreal also was ordered to show cause why its charter licence should not be suspended.

The order against Nordair involves the operation of charter flights from Athens and Rome to Montreal and one flight from Montreal to Paris.

Travel Deficit Slows

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's travel deficit increased by $78 million last year, the smallest jump since 1975, says Statislics Canada.

The federal agency reported Monday that the country had a 1978 travel deficit of $1.7 billion. Canadians spent $4.1 billion travelling outside the country while visitors spent $2.4 billion in Canada.

Although spending abroad increased by more than $400 million last year, the agency attributed most of this rise to inflation and the drop in the value of the country's currency. Both these influence make foreign travel more expensive, while tending to discourage Canadians from taking as many foreign vacations.

Actual visits by Canadians to the United States decreased by 1.6 per cent. Trips to destinations other than the U.S., increased by 1.8 per cent.

Except for the Olympics in 1976 and Expo '67, Canada has had a chronic deficit in international travel since the early 1960s. Since the mid 1970s, it has been about $2 billion.

Government spokesman have recently been predicting a turn-around in the travel deficit. They say the weak dollar has made travel in the country a bargain while forcing Canadians to think twice about paying high foreign prices.

Did you purchase your RRSP at the usual place just because it was convenient?

Many people consider buying RRSP's a matter of convenience. But when you invest only once a year in an RRSP, and the outcome of that decision will affect your entire retirement, you owe it to yourself to seek out all the options.

Royal Trust offers six RRSP options. For example, your guaranteed interest returns can vary like a savings account or be guaranteed for 5 years. You can invest in a bond fund, or a mortgage fund. You can participate in our Canadian common stock fund. Or, you can have a self-directed plan.

The choice is yours.

Did you put this year's RRSP deposit in your own name again, rather than your spouse's?

Under current regulations, you and your spouse will each be allowed up to $1000 of retirement income after age 65 without paying any tax. You can now make all or part of your allowable annual RRSP contribution in your spouse's name and still claim it as a deduction from your taxable income. That way you get the tax deduction now, and you both may claim a $1000 deduction later.

Spousal RRSP's make a lot of sense.

Did you pay a commission to buy your RRSP?

The amount of dollars available for your retirement is dependent on how much is actually invested each year. If you pay a commission, less goes into your account. That doesn't have to be, and it doesn't happen when you buy a Royal Trust RRSP.

Did you make a big mistake?

If you haven't made this year's contribution, you can still avoid these potential mistakes. Talk things over with Royal Trust first.

If you have already made this year's contribution, we can still help. Most RRSP's can be easily transferred without affecting your annual allowable contribution or income tax status. If you agree that a Royal Trust RRSP is better for you than your present plan, we'll have it quickly switched over.

And don't miss depositing for the 1978 tax year because of a lack of funds. Talk to us about a Tax Saver Loan. Your tax savings alone could more than offset your interest costs.

Make no mistake about it.

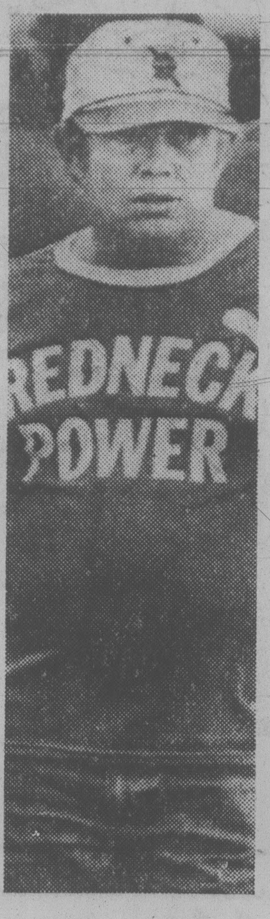
Peanut Books Cooked by Billy?



BILLY CARTER

WASHINGON (WP) — FBI agents, in a three-week investigation of loans from the National Bank of Georgia (NBG) to the Carter peanut warehouse in Plains, Ga., have found indications that the bank's records may have been falsified, The Washington Post has learned.

Sources say the FBI investigation raises the question of whether Billy Carter, the president's brother, and at least one bank official were involved in doctoring the records.

The suspected manipulation of the Carter warehouse loan records, which went undetected both by bank and warehouse accountants, was to show there was more collateral backing the loans than actually existed, sources say.

Sources stress that the report was prepared in a rush and that findings are preliminary.

The FBI investigation of the loans was an offshoot of a federal grand jury probe in Atlanta of the financial affairs of former budget director Bert Lance.

Lance arranged the loans in 1975, shortly after he became president of NBG. The line of credit, which quickly grew to $6.5 million, became the bank's biggest account.

FBI agents assigned to the investigation think the questionable handling of the loan in 1976 and 1977 was directed by Lance and carried out by Robert Flynt, then an NBG loan officer, sources say.

Flynt, now with a bank in Jacksonville, Fla., refused comment Monday on the report. "I couldn't comment. I'll refer that to NBG," he said.

"It was not necessarily me," he said about the FBI report concerning possible alteration of bank records.

Billy Carter was in Sumter County (Ga.) hospital Monday where he was admitted on Friday for treatment of a bronchitis condition. An attorney in the Americus, Ga., law firm representing Carter said there would be no comment on the report.

In December, Billy Carter testified before the Atlanta grand jury investigating Lance's finances. Later, he told reporters that he had invoked the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination on certain questions asked by federal attorneys.

This week, according to sources, that same grand jury will take up the finding of the FBI probe into the Carter warehouse loans.

Jimmy's Sister Finds Her Tune Too Arresting

AMERICUS, Ga. — President Jimmy Carter's sister, Gloria Spann, is free on personal recognizance bond after being charged with illegal harmonica playing. "Obviously I have less talent than I thought," Mrs. Spann said Monday night. She, her husband, Walter, and two other persons were arrested Saturday night at the McWaffle restaurant. Mrs. Spann said in an interview she and a dozen friends went to the restaurant "after a musical evening at my house," and one of the group dared her to play the harmonica. She said she had been learning to play it for about a month. "I went in playing. By the time I sat down, a girl came over and said, 'You can't play that thing in here,' " Mrs. Spann said. "My husband said, 'Play me another tune,' so I played some more." Police got a complaint from the restaurant's assistant manager, who said patrons couldn't hear the jukebox, said police officer Mae Davis. She said she asked the Spanns to leave, but "they said they paid for their food and weren't leaving," so she called for help and a lieutenant arrived and made the arrests.

TIMMINS, Ont.— A Timmins man paid the first instalment of his property tax bill Monday with a cheque written on one of his T-shirts. "I feel the city of Timmins wants the shirt off my back, so here it is," Allan Norman told the cashier at city hall when he went to pay the first instalment of a $500-plus tax bill. Norman says his taxes have increased about $350 this year and he's not too happy about it. Asked whether the next instalment will be paid on a pair of shorts, Norman just laughed.

TORONTO — Allen Spraggett, astrologer, author and television show host who faces two charges of gross indecency, resigned Monday from his astrology show on radio station CFRB Toronto. Spraggett, 46, was to appear today in provincial court in Winnipeg with a several of other men facing similar charges. Spraggett said on the air that the charges had caused him, his wife and his five children terrible anguish. "In our law, charges, though they may be baseless, can be laid and publicized and I have to live with that," he said.

HONG KONG — Prince Charles will dot the eyes of a dragon during his four day visit to this British colony, a government spokesman reported Monday. The dragon, a symbol of royalty, was prepared in honor of his visit. Prince Charles will bring the dragon "to life" by dotting its eyes at the Yen Long stadium to trigger off a colorful ceremony that will involve almost 1,000 students and young people from all over Hong Kong. The eye-dotting ceremony goes back 1,400 years to the reign of Emperor Liang Wu Ti, who ordered one of his master painters to paint four dragons on the walls of a temple. Legend has it that the eyes were left blank, with the painter explaining that if they were dotted, the dragons would "come to life." When a disbeliever challenged the painter's prophecy by dotting the eyes of two of the dragons, thunder and lightning filled the air and the dragons flew away.

LONDON — There's a new head on Elvis Presley's shoulders at Madame Tussaud's today, but it's still not right, says Caroline Zetland, president of the north London branch of the official Elvis Presley Fan Club. The previous head caused a storm of protests last year when it was put on show and for the first time the world famous waxworks changed a head because of public opinion. "It's a vast improvement, but it's still not true to life — nobody will ever capture him," said Mrs. Zetland, who supplied pictures of Presley and acted as adviser to sculptor Ian Hanson to create the Elvis of 1969.

SYDNEY, Australia — American stunt man Evel Knievel has cancelled his Australian tour and is flying home to a chorus of boos from Australians. Knievel failed to appear at a performance in the town of Griffith this week and 5,000 spectators — many had driven long distances to be there — changed: "Go home Yankees. Go home." He told reporters today he had called off the tour because "some of the venues are not up to the standards I require."

LONDON — Tom Keating, a faker of masters who wrote a book on how to copy famous paintings and peddle them as genuine, went free Monday when doctors said he is too ill to endure further trial proceedings. The case had been postponed last month when the 61-year-old artist was admitted to hospital with a heart condition. He had pleaded not guilty in Old Bailey criminal court in London to nine charges of deception and conspiracy to defraud. The prosecution withdrew the case after the doctors testified. As the trial ended, Keating copies of the English landscape painter John Constable were on sale in a gallery across the street at $120 each.

ADELAIDE, Australia — An Adelaide University scientist is trying to determine whether kissing can spread tooth decay. Dr. Tony Rogers, a senior lecturer in oral biology at the university, is working on two projects concerned with the possible transmission and prevention of dental decay. In the latest University Newsletter, Rogers said experiments on the spread of tooth decay indicate the decay-producing organisms can be transmitted from person to person via the saliva, perhaps through kissing.

Angola Renews Pledge To Rebels

LONDON (Reuter) — Angola pledged Monday to "continue to give unconditional support" to black nationalist guerrillas in southern Africa "until the final defeat of the hateful regime of (Rhodesian Prime Minister) Ian Smith."

The pledge was in a communique sent to Reuters news agency in London by Angola's official news agency ANGOP, following an air raid earlier Monday by Rhodesian aircraft on a guerrilla training camp inside the western African country.

The communique condemned the raid as "criminal aggression."

It said five French-built Mirage jet aircraft of the Rhodesian Air Force raided the training centre about 32 kilometres from Luena, capital of Moxico province in eastern Angola.

"The racists see in this aggression . . . a way of delaying their inevitable and early defeat," it added.

Hijack-Team Surrenders

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Two men and two women of apparently four different nationalities surrendered to police today after hijacking a Soviet Aeroflot airliner shortly before it touched down for a scheduled stopover in Stockholm, authorities said.

Insp. Soren Lundgren of the Stockholm police tentatively identified the two men as Swedish and Indian and two women as Brazilian and West German, but said there are still doubts about their nationalities. It was earlier reported that the hijackers were Soviet citizens.

The Brazilian woman has asked for political asylum in Sweden, Lundgren said, but the motives of the others are unclear.

The hijackers were quoted as saying they carried explosives and had placed bombs in the Tupolev 154 airliner, whose passengers were brought to the terminal while police searched the plane.

It was not immediately clear whether the jetliner, Aeroflot flight 212 en route from Oslo, Norway, to Moscow, would continue its flight today. There were 24 passengers and ten crew aboard.

The crew asked for police assistance soon before its scheduled arrival in Stockholm, the control tower said. The plane later parked at an emergency runway and ambulances and fire engines raced to the scene.

In May, 1977, a 37-year-old man hijacked an Aeroflot plane to Stockholm during a domestic flight in Soviet Latvia. The Swedish authorities granted him political asylum and sentenced him to four years in prison for hijacking. The Soviet Union later accused Sweden of leniency.

Hood Canal Ferries Back Again

The service was discontinued in 1961 when a floating bridge was opened, but two weeks ago the western half of the two-kilometre span sank in a windstorm.

Amin Forces Retake Centre

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Ugandan troops have recaptured the southern regional centre of Masaka from an invasion force from Tanzania, Uganda Radio said today.

The broadcast said President Idi Amin had been informed by the commander of Uganda's crack suicide battalion that the town, captured two days ago had been won back after heavy fighting.

But observers say pressure on Amin seems to be mounting internally and externally.

Exile sources in Nairobi say a heavily armed force which has occupied large areas of southwest Uganda now is between the border and the capital, Kampala.

In Kampala many people did not turn up for work today and tanks were parked at several strategic places in the city.

Questions of Semantics

A cabinet order issued last week to cover $36 million in excess spending in the human resources ministry has touched off a flurry of questions. When, for instance, is an overrun not an overrun? And when is a spending increase not a spending increase?

The order was a special warrant passed under legislation which gives cabinet the power to increase spending for any program beyond that originally estimated in the budget.

It is not unusual. For decades warrants have been used to finance extraordinary expenditures at year's end.

Neither is it surprising. Governments would have to be clairvoyant to predict correctly a year in advance the exact amount to be spent in each of hundreds of programs. Provided that the original budgets for most programs are relatively accurate and that governments use warrants carefully and sparingly, the system is an entirely proper and practical one.

Arguments arise in B.C. about warrants only because they have been made a highly political issue in recent years. For this, Social Credit must take the blame. During the NDP's term, the Socred opposition blasted the special warrants issued by the government, condemning these "overruns" as proof of the NDP's financial incompetence.

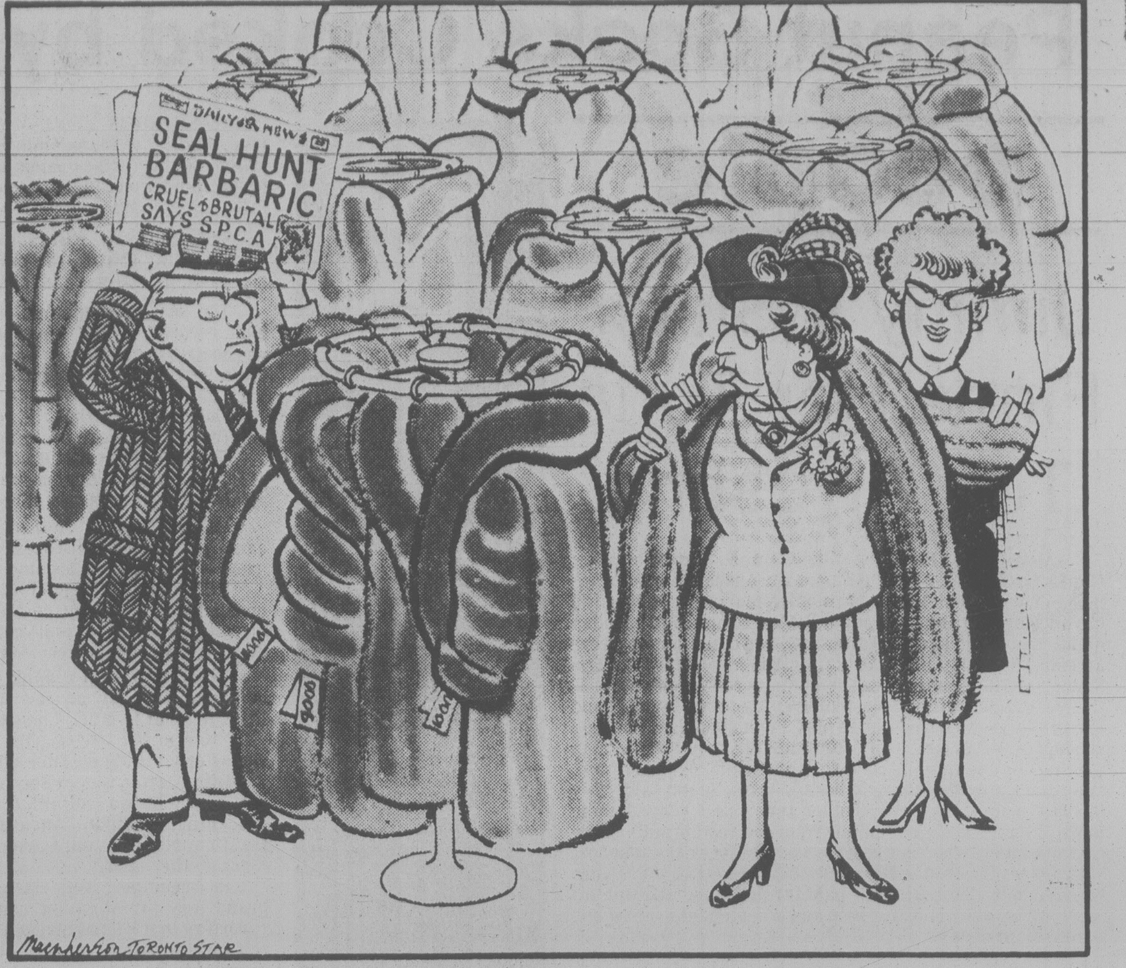
Now that the Socreds are in government and passing warrants, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe defends his party, saying that the warrants don't really represent "overruns" at all. Overruns, he said, occur only when the government doesn't have the "underruns" in some other accounts to make up the difference.

All right. Fair enough. But by that standard, the NDP didn't have any overruns either until their last year in government.

The more interesting question in the whole furore concerns the increase in spending by the human resources ministry announced by minister Grace McCarthy last week. Mrs. McCarthy said there would be an increase of $31 million in the welfare budget in 1979-80.

But since the overrun in the current year is predicted at $36 million, is that a realistic figure? Does it mean in fact that there'll be almost no real difference between 1978-79 spending and the 1979-80 budget? If so, how does the government plan to finance its increased welfare rates, especially with larger welfare rolls predicted as a result of unemployment insurance cutbacks?

The public deserves speedy answers to these questions. "When is an overrun not an overrun?" may be mainly a question of semantics, but "when is a spending increase not a spending increase?" is a serious query about the spending of public funds.



Spring and the Seal Hunt

Crocuses bloom, calves and lambs come into the world, and the annual Newfoundland seal hunt gets under way. All have become synonymous with spring, and in the world the last has become a nasty little symbol of Canada. The glossy travel ads picturing the Rockies, Capt. Cook bicentennial promotions, yellow wheat fields and tall grain elevators, red-coated Mounties on Parliament Hill are replaced by poignant scenes of snow white baby seals with big brown eyes being clubbed to death on the ice.

The fact that it is a spurious image created with singleminded ferocity by a number of protest groups bent on painting Newfoundlanders as brutal, bestial people is unfortunately not much appreciated beyond the waters of Cabot Strait. To the Americans (who themselves condone a similar but little known seal hunt in the Aleutian Islands) and the English and the French, we Canadians are unspeakably barbaric.

Common sense and logic are weak weapons of defence against the emotional furore whipped up overseas and in the U.S., but someone must reply to the nonsense being spread about by groups like the International Fund for Animal Welfare and B.C.'s Greenpeace.

Through the years they have made many claims about the seals facing imminent extinction, but here it is 1979 and the seal herds continue to thrive though Newfoundlanders and Norwegians take as many as 200,000 skins a year.

Killing seals with a pointed club may not be particularly pleasant to watch, but then neither are the methods used to put the Sunday roast on the table. Do the save-the-seal protesters hurl their bodies onto the assembly lines of slaughterhouses? Do they renounce Big Macs and leather shoes?

Such comparisons may seem unfair, but they are mild compared to the epithets easily tossed off by the seal hunt's opponents. The International Fund for Animal Welfare talks of "this barbaric annual rite" carried out by "atavistic Newfoundlanders," also known as "late stone-agers."

Evidence of a little restraint and common sense would greatly help the opponents of the hunt. Hysteria may be contagious among the committed, but it only repels the skeptical and unconvinced majority.

Trudeau Still Charms Them

TORONTO — The best place from which to observe a prime ministerial visit is to position yourself, as I did by luck, among the RCMP secret service men. They are easy to spot: all are bright-eyed, broad-shouldered, short-haired and suffer from an acute hearing problem that requires them to wear an ear piece with a wire running down from it.

A bunch of them, me remaining inconspicuous in their midst, hung about at the door of the Royal York hotel library watching the cabinet ministers straggle in for their ceremonial meeting. I craned to overhear whispered exchanges about mad bombers and hairy leftists.

Supply and Services Minister Pierre Debane came by, lugging what looked to be a sable trimmed coat. "A shortass, isn't he," said a bright-eyed broad-shouldered type to my right.

Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo stalked by in that leonine way of hers. "Boy, she's something," said a bright-eyed, broad-shouldered type in front of me. "Yummy, yummy," said the one to my right.

Liberals Still Lag

On to lesser matters. Toronto still is soft. A survey completed three weeks ago by Liberal pollster Martin Goldfarb puts the Liberals 10 percentage points behind the Conservatives here.

As one consequence, a decision on the election date which almost was taken three weeks ago, now has been postponed until early March. As another consequence, the Liberals sent Pierre Elliot Trudeau and 18 ministers to do what they could to make Torontonians less soft.

To the extent that it could, the tactic worked. Cabinet ministers hurried from a television studio and radio studio and then sat down to listen with grave attention while a spokesman for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association denounced "excessive government intervention" and then asked the government to intervene to supply more skilled workers and to subsidize research. Trade Minister Jack Horner broke a glass in his bare hands. Campagnolo looked yummy.

So did Trudeau. He showed Torontonians he can still perform, when he wanted to, as a philosopher and as a king.

As a philosopher, Trudeau charmed and awed 1,000 students crammed into the auditorium of the Osgoode Hall law school auditorium, He dropped names — a quote from "Hodges" and two citations in Latin. He dodged questions he didn't like — "would you negotiate special status," for instance — by pretending not to understand them. He used the questions he did like to say what he wanted to say, such as that "no state is eternal. The only thing that will keep us together is the will to stay together."

Afterwards, students jammed around Trudeau to get his autograph on everything from class copies of the British North America Act to textbooks like The Philosophy of Religion. One girl, blonde hair halfway to her waist, told him, "It was wonderful to hear you quote Hodges. I'm studying him." Trudeau fed her back a fresh Hodges quote.

Trudeau left with four hockey shirts in the red and white colours of the Osgoode Hall Owls for himself, Justin, Sacha and Charles-Emile, and the votes of just about every student over 18.

As a king, or at the very least as a capo, Trudeau had the votes of everyone in Tony's ballroom even before he entered the place. In the low ceilinged basement, in heat so stifling one teenager passed out, more than 1,000 Italian-Canadians waited for him, standing for an hour. When he arrived, they chanted "Trudeau, Trudeau, Trudeau," and waved red, white and green Italian flags. They cheered what he said. Some may even have understood what he said. Then he got into his limousine and they into chartered buses.

Keep Toronto Warm

Actually, one thing that Trudeau did say was worth understanding. To the contingent of Italian-Canadians dispatched to cheer him, Trudeau slipped in a reference to Iran as "creating some danger to our oil supplies." Earlier, he told the law students that Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's demands for full provincial control over natural resources was "pretty shocking."

The issue of national unity, the Liberals have discovered, is as soft as Toronto. To give Trudeau's campaign a harder edge, the Liberals now are putting their energies into energy — PetroCanada, the oil allocation legislation now before the Commons and the National Energy Board report on gas exports due next week.

Toronto may or may not buy a born again philosopher king. A prime minister who saves Torontonians from freezing in the dark, though, has to be pretty yummy.

Govan, Sask.

A committee in Govan, Sask., is compiling a book on the history of the town and surrounding school districts. They are anxious to get geneologies of former residents, chief details of life of original settlers, why they came, and how they travelled, their occupation while here, names and places of residence of children and grandchildren. Interesting anecdotes and pictures welcome. Please address replies to Mrs. Susan Brooks, Govan, Sask. S0G 1Z0. — Susan Brooks, Govan, Sask.

Bouey in the Dark

Mr. Bouey, the governor of the Bank of Canada has appeared before the House of Commons committee on finance and we learn that there are signs of an upturn in the economy. We find that Canada's job creation rate is the best in the world, and on top of this goody (which may not stand up to analysis) Mr. Bouey somehow expects us to connect his efforts to stem the drop in the value of the Canadian dollar by pushing up the prime lending rate with his belief that Canada must remain competitive. Since our buoyant export market is generally acknowledged to be due, at present, to the cheap Canadian dollar, most of us might be forgiven for wondering what on earth Mr. Bouey is talking about.

Mr. Bouey of course cannot tell us what the real trouble is. He is an employee of the government and no employee is about to make a successful career out of implying that he is really working for a collection of economic amateurs, even if they are highly skilled at conning a voting public which is not inclined to spend the time or the mental effort to figure things out for themselves.

At the Liberal convention in Victoria last week [Small Business Minister Tony] Abbott attempted to still worried voices from some of the party faithful by saying that we have not spent the money we have borrowed from Japan ($500 million) but are simply turning it into Canadian dollars. Mr. Abbott, unless he needs a course in simple arithmetic, knows perfectly well that the worried voices are aware that borrowing sums of this kind, since there are huge sums in interest to be paid in yen, is an act of desperation, no matter whether the money is spent or not, brought on by the government's "popularity first, common sense later if politically expedient" policy.

We are addicted to the basic fallacy that an increase in trade based on a devalued dollar is a permanent blessing. There is a lot of evidence to show that anyone who consistently gets the short end of a trading bargain does not get very rich. The amount we have to sell to service our ever increasing foreign debts is a matter of great concern. It is things like this which are worrying even some Liberals, and so they should. — H. E. F. Makovski, 3539 Plymouth Road.

Who Gets Control

It's odd that so little attention has been paid by the usual sharp commentators to the announced aim of the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation share distribution. This is the loud claim by our premier that it will enable ordinary citizens to gain direct control of part of the provincial economy.

The share distribution is supposed to introduce every ordinary working person to the mysteries of investment and convert him to the excitement of playing the market. Out with the Western, in with BCRIC. No longer will the beer parlors reverberate to quarrels over the Vancouver Canucks defence. No, in measured tones, unemployed carpenters will discuss debentures and equity, perhaps even planning the takeover of Daon Development. And all of this sparked by five shares given free by Jogger Bill.

The once satisfied worker is to be transformed into an active member of the investment community, he is to be one with the eastern banker, the foreign investor, and even the predatory railway company. For five share certificates, produced at taxpayer expense with little regard for trouble or cost, the ordinary guy is to be transported form cost-inflated 1979 backwards to the heady optimism of 1929.

But if MacBlo can be securely controlled by those good British Columbians who, I'm told, only hold 17.4 per cent of its shares, then who will control my BCRIC? Out there in the real world of business, the majority shareholder calls the tune and sometimes pays the piper. So, I ask, who is to be the majority shareholder in my BCRIC? The group who controls the 20 per cent of course, and who are they but our one familiar friendly little government? No one else, not even the pension funds limited to a three per cent holding, will be able to equal the controlling interest of government.

With my five shares I am to have no vote, no voice, no say in anything. For that I will have to buy at least another 95 shares costing me about $1,000, and even that only gets me one vote, just one. With that maybe they'll let me attend a shareholder's meeting and I might get to put a question, maybe.

The plain inescapable fact is that the government will still control the corporation, will still appoint the directors from the same high places, and you and I will have the same control as before — zilch!

Dream on Millionaire Bill. Five shares of $50 can't buy my vote. It won't start to pay for the seven per cent sales tax years, the unnecessary 50 per cent ICBC premium increase, the $12 ferry fare, the 50 cent bus ride and the dollars I'm going to pay through the gas pumps when I get to "control" our urban transit. — W. B. Miller, 3-1010 Queens Avenue.

Blood Donors

Mrs. Pettigrew's letter Blood Donors (Times, Feb. 20) concerning a telephone reminder for regular blood donors points out a problem with which the Red Cross has been struggling for some time. There are some 8,000 to 9,000 donors in the area served by the Victoria branch and 30 to 35 locations at which clinics are held. For each location there is a register of donors who have made their first donation there. Red Cross requests these registers whenever a telephone committee can be provided to use them.

Our clinics with the largest number of regular donors are at Red Cross House and for donors registered there a monthly list of eligible donors is obtained. A large group of dedicated volunteers share the task of telephoning these 1,500-or-so donors each month.

The Red Cross has been transferring hundreds of names from the less-frequent and more transient clinics to the Red Cross House register and is only too willing to do so if donors let us know they wish to be reminded on a regular basis.

Concerning the recent panic, the situation came about because of a reduced number of clinics over the holidays, a bout of influenza that reduced clinic attendance and no holiday in blood requirements. "Panic" clinics are most unwelcome to Red Cross and place a great strain on the donor teams and laboratory. They are resorted to only in the most compelling circumstances, never merely to increase clinic attendance. — G.D. Savage, Co-ordinator, Blood Donor Clinics, Canadian Red Cross Society, Victoria.

Noise War

It comes with some surprise that Oak Bay council in its infinite wisdom have seem fit not to allow doctors and dentists to practise from their homes.

There can't be much noise with the coming and going of people. Yet in another prime residential area of Oak Bay, there is a car repair shop right opposite Windsor Park with the revving of engines with attendant exhaust fumes to such an extent that windows have to be kept shut even on warm days.

Last week a lady in an adjacent apartment block had a bad bout of flu. To quote her: "Noise! You would have thought there was a private war going on."

The reaction of council to this is: "If you don't like it sue them." This complaint has been in the municipal office since early May, 1978.

Council's attitude was reported to the apartment's residents with the rider that at the end of the year there will be an election and owners and friends were advised to vote for anybody but the incumbents. Tenants and owners of the Rudyard Kipling and other apartment blocks in the area, plus private residences, please note.

On the Gravy Train

Anyone with a grain of sense must know that with an election in the offing the millionaires' club is fuelling up its gravy train with our money!

They are starting to kick the goodies out of the caboose with things like $31 million for more welfare. This manoeuvre will probably benefit mighty few and is likely a great deal less than these needy people would have had years ago under the NDP.

You see, this and countless other goodies to come before the election are being, as predicted, financed by money we should have had in our pockets over the past three years.

All the surpluses represent overtaxing and hardship endured over these years merely so they can try to fool the people by dishing out their own money at election time and hope the people have forgotten how they have been ripped off!

If the people of B.C. have such short memories and ever elect this gang again they deserve to look forward to more years of depression, oppression and despair while the rich get richer and the poor get poorer. — Phil Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

It's Little Things that Lead to Divorce Court

By ENID NEMY
New York Times

It would seem unlikely that a woman now married for the second time would end up with a man who eats fried eggs in exactly the same peculiar manner as her first husband. But she did, and whenever there are fried eggs on the plate, there's divorce in the air.

"The whites have to be crisp and the yolks soft," she explained. "They eat carefully around the yolk, being very careful not to break it, and finally they take the whole yolk and put it in their mouths and plop it. It was disgusting with my first husband, and it's just as disgusting now."

There aren't all that many yolk ploppers around, but a vast and informal survey indicates that human ingenuity is unbounded when it comes to the tortures casually inflicted in day-to-day living. It is, according to the same survey, not the major problems, but just such small, theoretically inconsequential things that drive most people to the brink of mayhem, divorce or screaming meemies. Dripping taps, scratching cats and hangnails run a poor third.

"I have lived with a succession of cover stealers," said one woman. "It sounds petty, but when you wake up three or four times each night because you are freezing to death, and see this lump beside you cuddled in your part of the blanket, you begin to understand what they mean about temporary insanity.

It's also not funny, said the same woman, sharing a double bed when one of the occupants sleeps vertically and the other diagonally.

"I'm the vertical sleeper," she said. "Every night I'm edged off the bed, at an angle. Believe me, it's pretty hard to sleep with your head on the pillow and your feet on the floor, and freezing, to boot."

The Sheet Kicker

Sleeping habits are apparently a constant thorn for bedmates. There are pillow fetishists, who insist on two or three pillows under their head and another pillow or two to wrap their arms around. And even worse are the sheet adversaries — the neat and precise against the free and easy. One tucks the sheet in, the other kicks it loose.

"I've kicked that sheet loose more than 7,500 times," said a man who celebrated his 25th wedding anniversary recently. "Figure a minute a night to get them loose, that's 125 hours down the drain."

Couples with twin beds, who avoid sheet, pillow and blanket problems, often end up speechless with rage about the one thing they do share — the night table.

"Unbelievable," said a young man who recently started sharing his bedroom with a young woman. "I used to have a telephone and books on the table. Now there's the telephone, my books, about 10 books of hers that she's started, hates, but thinks she is going to finish, Kleenex, nail file, hand lotion, a lipstick — I guess in case we're mugged some night — a yellow legal pad for notes on what she is going to do next day, a typed sheet of exercises that she never does, and a glass of Coca-Cola or spring water, depending on whether or not she's on her health kick."

However irritating the mess was, the young man said it had turned out to be a blessing.

"I could have married her before I found out," he said.

Shared bathrooms are another frontrunner in the irritation sweepstakes.

"We have three towel racks in our bathroom," said a woman. "Can you give me one good reason why my husband always flings his wet towel over the shower rod so that it's the first thing you see when you walk in the bathroom?"

Another woman complained that no matter how many towels she put out, her husband managed to use them all.

"In all our years together, I don't think I've ever managed to get an unused towel unless I carry it directly from the linen closet," she said. "I sometimes think if I put out 10 towels, he'd dry one finger on each one of them."

Talcum powder on bathroom carpets, gelatinous soap dishes, toothpaste with the cap off and hair or whiskers in the sink all get high marks as annoyances, but nothing compared to the indignation evoked by toilet tissue put on the roller the wrong way.

"You have to be a cretin to put it on the roller so that it goes over instead of under," said a man to whom the whole business was obviously a sore point. "You tell me how a woman can get through law school and still not figure out how a roll of toilet paper works."

Tissue in Pockets

Just so the obvious question wouldn't go unanswered, he was asked why he didn't change the toilet paper.

"I try," he said. "But she usually beats me to it. She thinks it's funny. She also thinks it's funny to squeeze out toothpaste without rolling up the tube at the bottom. Maybe it's funny in New York, but I was brought up in Minnesota where people are normal."

Still, it's that very same normal Minnesotan who sends his wife up the wall by leaving facial tissue in his pajama and robe pockets.

"I've asked him 4,000 times to take out the tissue before he puts things in the laundry," said the wife. "Does he — no! So everything comes out of the laundry with shredded tissue all over it, not to mention the hard, wadded balls of tissue left in the pockets."

Back to eating habits, and the kitchen, men and women who put dirty dishes in the sink, instead of on the counter or in the dishwasher, have added a lot of gray hair to the world, and the spouse or companion who cuts spaghetti may very well be cutting off a relationship as well.

Garbage is often a source of friction, the neat constantly at war with the slobs. Most people, ideally, opt for the neat, except sometimes.

"My husband says I have no sense of garbage," said a woman who is not only a cooking expert, but a neat one. "He wraps the garbage like Bergdorf Goodman sending a package. It's all subdivided into organic and nonorganic and wet and dry, and it looks gorgeous. It's also ridiculous."

The shredded tissue in the laundry reminded one woman, who receives masses of books by mail, of one of her major peeves.

"Those new mailers, with all that shredded stuff inside, are going to drive me crazy," she said. "It gets all over one's clothes and in the winter, with wools, it's murder."

Radios on Street

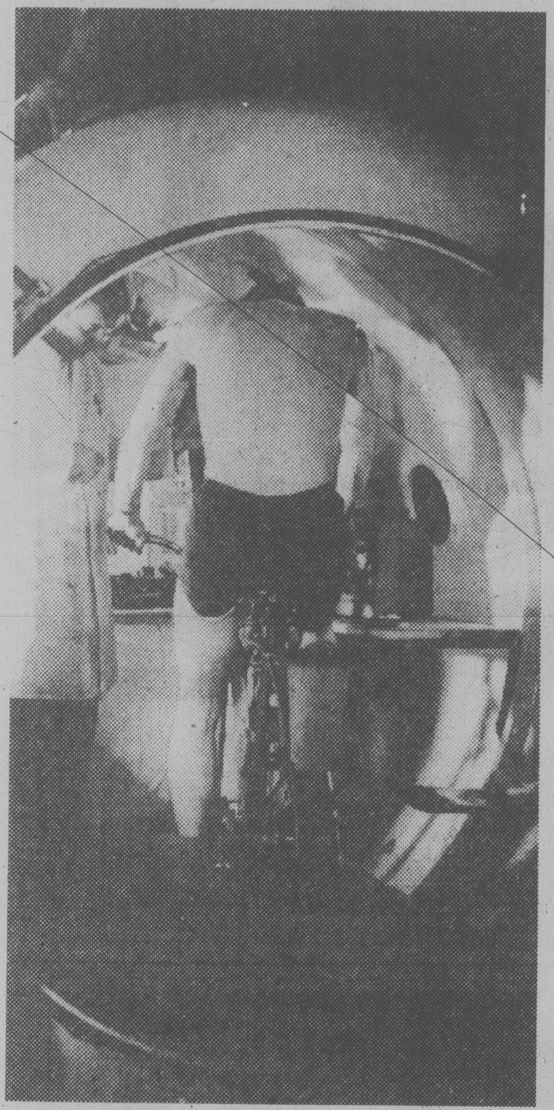
Another increasingly popular business practice, stationery without a telephone number, is infuriating a number of recipients.

"It tells me a lot about the company, and none of it is flattering," said an executive on the receiving end.

Music in beauty parlors, particularly loud and trendy music, and transistor radios on the street, are high on a number of hate lists, as are taxi drivers who think they are characters and never stop talking, and service people who don't say thank you when tipped.

"I divide the world into people who are postage stamp carriers, and those who aren't," said one man. "There are some people who are always asking for a stamp and after a while you begin to resent it. They usually pay for the stamp, so it isn't the money, but why don't they ever think to get to a post office?"

How to Manage Your Stress 'Creatively'



'The motor that keeps us going'

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

This doctor with all the degrees and awards and academic achievements is telling about how he hypnotized a wart off his hand — no ointment, no treatment, just a little mind-bending zap and the wart was gone.

There was nothing mental about the wart, he says; it was a small tumor caused by a virus, hardly a product of the imagination or an apt target for hypnosis. But to Dr. Howard Eisenberg, almost anything can be a suitable subject for mind-control.

"I hypnotized myself and drew a circle around the wart with a ballpoint pen and I imagined the pen was burning out the area. Two days later the wart disappeared. The same thing can be done with patients. You hypnotize the patient and paint the wart with colored water and tell him it is a special drug and the wart falls off in 24 hours.

"You can't just look at the wart and say 'go away.' Self-hypnosis is a matter of 'imaginal thinking,' learning a different way of experiencing the body . . . Perhaps 'imaginal thinking' is talking directly to the hormones."

If anybody can talk to hormones, maybe Dr. Eisenberg can. He is a doctor, a psychotherapist (he did a Masters in psychology and a medical degree at the same time by using what he calls "efficient mental management"), a parapsychologist who deals with the apparently supernatural, and a telepath with a reputation for being able to infiltrate other people's heads with his mental presence.

He lectures at the University of Toronto on such things as "the altered states of consciousness," consults on TV programs and is preparing a script for a science fiction movie. He is 32 years old, and in his Pierre Cardin shirt and unshined loafers looks anything but a doctor, let alone a scientist of the supernatural.

At the moment Dr. Eisenberg isn't talking about telepathy or extrasensory perception, or warts. He is talking about stress — the pounding tension that can twang the nerves like a guitar string; the boring grind of constant pressure; that feeling of helicopters swooping around in your stomach — and what to do about it. He says there is a lot we can do about it, and the first thing is to throw away the tranquilizers and learn to use stress as a benefit through mental control. ('Drugs don't teach us how to deal with anything; using tranquillizers or alcohol is just sweeping the dirt under the rug.")

Whether we are executives coping with a nerve-shuddering business schedule or housewives coping with noisy children in a small apartment, we can learn to manage stress creatively, he says.

Stress is, after all, essential to life; it is a motor that keeps us going and there is no way of abolishing it entirely. Yet it can cause or contribute to headaches, high blood pressure, ulcers, heart disease, even cancer. (Some U.S. doctors are treating cancer by teaching patients how to handle emotional stress and achieve some control of their bodies' immunological system.) Dr. Eisenberg, indeed, quotes authorities as saying virtually all diseases can be caused by the organism's falure to cope with stress. What counts is the level of stress we undergo, and how to use the vitality it provides while deflecting its harmful effects.

To manage stress creatively he prescribes "learning to use our minds in various ways." One of these is "simple" meditation — learning to shift the mind into neutral. Five or 10 minutes of meditation can alleviate a lot of stress for an executive."

Another is autogenic training, learning to influence the autonomic nervous system that controls blood pressure, sweating and so on. "Concentrate on your small right toe," Dr. Eisenberg says, and within a minute or so you are acutely conscious of the toe hidden in the shoe. "Now I could tell you to imagine it geting warmer and it actually would get warmer; we can measure the temperature. We can teach people with poor circulation how to increase the circulation to their extremities; if you teach someone with migraine headaches how to warm up the hands, the migraine tends to go away."

Biofeedback, using machines that make one aware of body functions, is another anti-stress technique. "Unfortunately there is a lot of hucksterism in the biofeedback market," says the doctor, "but a good basis of research exists and it is used effectively in treating cerebral palsy and some form of epilepsy."

Self-hypnosis, too, is a way of managing stress, and more. Many doctors today teach their patients this method of putting themselves into a state of partial dissociation from the sensory world. The hypnotic increasing of internal awareness can produce what Dr. Eisenberg calls imaginal thinking. "There is some evidence that people can actually lose weight with imaginal thinking. There are some clues that hypnosis may trigger chemical changes in the brain. Hypnosis can make a person feel less pain; hypnosis can raise the level of endorphins in the body, and endorphins are the morphine-like substance produced by the brain to increase tolerance of pain."

None of this, Dr. Eisenberg insists, is quackery, nor is it part of a pseudo-scientific fad. "We are not using little black boxes or psychic surgery; there is a very good research data base for these techniques . . . Laboatories have proved that yogis actually can stop their hearts . . . We have learned that the Senoi people of Malaysia can control their dreams instead of dreaming like spectators at a movie."

The stress-control techniques form part of the repertoire of holistic medicine, a growing movement in which patients are encouraged to take a degree of responsibility for their own treatment. The physician acts as a guide or teacher, helping patients interpret the biological feedback of their disease, advising them on mental tactics to combat illness, and prescribing a minimum of medicine.

"Conventional medicine regards the body only as a machine. There is more to us than that," argues Dr. Eisenberg. "Perhaps it is time to rethink our whole way of medicine. Certainly the costs of the present system are so high that eventually we will be forced to look for alternative ways, such as holistic medicine, to keep people healthy."

Pity the Inept Parent

russell baker

In this nightmare, one of the children telephones and says, "Dad, I want you to give me $350,000." At one time or another all the children have asked me for a nickel. Sometimes I gave it to them, sometimes I didn't. But $350,000 . . . We all know inflation is here to stay, but this is monstrous.

"I can let you have a quarter," I say, "and if you've done something foolish we'll try to get the bail reduced. I'll call a lawyer."

"You don't understand," the child says. "I already have a lawyer. I'm suing you for $350,000." In the cinematic fashion of dreams the scene shifts instantly to a courtroom. A judge pronounces me justly sued while this child, on whom I have bestowed the nickels of love, accepts the congratulations of his attorney.

The stimulus of this dream is a Colorado lawsuit brought by Tom Hansen, a 24-year-old who claims damages of $350,000 from his parents on charges that they neglected his needs for clothing, food, shelter and psychological support at critical periods in his life. "Basically what we are doing," his lawyer has said, "is bringing suit for malpractice of parenting."

As a legal concept, "malpractice of parenting" is terrifying. "Malpractice" is a dereliction in professional duty and may result from criminal intent, mere negligence or a lack of skill, learning or competence. What parent doesn't commit malpractice under most of these definitions? Incompetence is rampant among parents. Few start with the skills necessary to rear a child, and such learning as they acquire is usually not mastered until the task is almost over.

Even then, it is rarely of professional calibre. I know of middle-aged parents who, after rearing a full brood, reproduce anew, only to discover that what they learned first time around doesn't work at all for the new baby.

Very few parents are professionals. Most people do not spend the college years struggling to get into preparent school, do not go on to three or four years of graduate education in parenthood, do not spend a year or two as apprentices to rich and distinguished parents who impart their secrets and do not become licensed by the local branches of their American Child-Rearing Association.

Thanks to Dr. Spock parents today are not the total amateurs Adam and Eve were, but most are still a long way from qualifying to hang out a shingle. Indeed, child-rearing professionals disagree even among themselves about what malpractice is. Thus Dr. Spock was accused of malpractice by that other widely accepted authority, Spiro Agnew, who charged that the Spock philosophy produced the evils of "permissiveness."

Even parents who leave the obstetrics wing under the delusion that they possess child-rearing know-how have their ignorance and imcompetence painfully illustrated to them by the time their task reaches adolescence.

The pleasure of parenthood can never be persuasively described to a stranger. You have to be there. Part of it comes from the richer texture of a life connected to the puzzle of a tight human nexus, but part of it, too, flows from the discovery, forced upon you by children, that humility is the beginning of wisdom.

Very likely I bestowed those nickels at the wrong time, when they went for candy that caused tooth decay and pain. Often, I am sure, I withheld them when they were acutely needed to supply psychological support at a critical period, when status among peers was at stake. Without a professional degree in the field, it is almost impossible to skirt the sins of malpractice, and it would be a dense child with a very inferior lawyer who could not make a jury weep to the argument that it was parents who made the adult the court sees before it.

I would be hard-pressed to come up with the $350,000. I could probably pay off the complainant's parking tickets without a whimper, but don't know whether I should. The Spiro Agnew school might charge me with malpractice of parenting.

Thousands at W.A.C. Rites

Political leaders, family, business associates, friends and aquaintances gathered in Kelowna today to pay their last respects to one of Canada's best known politicians.

Services were also held this afternoon here in Victoria and in Vancouver for W.A.C. Bennett, renowned for his unorthodox and charismatic style that colored the Canadian political scene for more than two decades.

The services for the former premier who died Friday night after a lengthy illness attracted thousands of mourners.

The main building of the red brick First United Church on Kelowna's main street held only 450 people so the church hall was fitted with closed-circuit television and the outside of the building was equipped with loudspeakers.

In Kelowna, federal Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Liberal Senator Ray Perrault represented the federal Liberal party while former prime minister John Diefenbaker and Nova Scotia MP Elmer McKay were to lead the federal Conservative contingent.

John Arnett, press secretary to B.C. Premier Bill Bennett, son of W. A. C. Bennett, said dozens of telegrams had arrived from throughout the world to pay tribute to the late premier.

In a telegram addressed to Premier Bill Bennett, Queen Elizabeth said she was extremely sorry to hear of his father's death and expressed her heartfelt sympathy.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer said he knew Bennett's "great contributions to the development of B.C. will not soon be forgotten by the people of the province."

The governor-general attended the Victoria service.

The only nephew of W.A.C. Bennett said he was a man devoted to the development of the province.

"He was its (B.C.'s) best salesman," said J. Bennett Macaulay, a Sussex, N.B., businessman who also serves as Conservative constituency association president for the federal riding of Funday Royal.

Kelowna residents also expressed respect and admiration for Bennett.

Ted Dodd, an investment dealer and Bennett's local campaign manager and friend for 26 years, said Bennett had great dreams for B.C.

"He had a vision of making B.C. from a have-not province to a have province and his vision was fulfilled," Dodd said in an emotional interview in his downtown office. "He was a really great citizen, an excellent citizen."

R. P. MacLean, former publisher of the Kelowna Courier, called Bennett "probably one of the greatest premiers B.C. ever had" but also said he was a man you either liked or disliked.

"He generally inspired loyalty among any of the people who knew him and those who didn't know him often didn't like him," MacLean said.

Plate Curbs Irk Envoys

VANCOUVER (UPC) — New regulations restricting the use of diplomatic license plates go into effect Thursday and Vancouver's foreign consuls are quietly indignant about losing privileges previously accorded to their private cars.

The issue began a month ago when the licensing authority advised the consuls that diplomatic plates would be issued only for cars registered in their own countries and used only on official consulate business.

A government spokesman said under the new regulations private cars will not be allowed to display diplomatic plates.

Car owners in British Columbia are required to obtain new licence plates this year when they renew their mandatory government insurance premiums at costs ranging from $200 to $800.

Normally, licence plates are exchanged with car purchases and range from $5 for a sub-compact to $58 for a luxury model.

Diplomatic plates cost $2 and the driver is immune from parking restrictions, traffic violations, speeding tickets and obligatory insurance.

Prior to the new regulations diplomatic plates were issued to all consulate staff members and honorary consuls on proof of identity.

The spokesman for the Motor Vehicles Branch said the new regulations have produced a stream of calls and letters from honorary consuls in the city protesting the restriction.

Some of the discussions became "quite heated, but always dignified," he said, adding that "there will be no exceptions" to the new law.

"It means they (the diplomats) can no longer run their personal cars with diplomatic immunity simply because they have accepted an honorary post in their country's diplomatic service," he said.

"The restrictions are long overdue. There are 19 foreign consuls in the city and 15 of them are honorary positions with no official staffs or offices.

"But our records show that we issued 143 diplomatic plates to people who were able to show they were in consulate employ," he said. "Usually, this required nothing more than a letter from the consul."

$1.5 Million In Aid For Forest Research

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. government has promised to contribute $1.5 million this year towards the financing of two federal government forest research laboratories that will be taken over by private industry April 1.

Bob Rogers, chairman and chief executive officer of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., said the B.C. contribution is the first provincial government commitment toward running the laboratories, one on the University of B.C. campus and the other in Ottawa.

NDP Picks Langan

Joy Langan, a vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, has been nominated by the NDP to run for the North Vancouver-Seymour seat in the May 31 provincial byelection.

Langan, 36, a member of the International Typographical Union, was nominated by acclamation Friday in the riding left vacant by the resignation of Social Credit MLA Jack Davis.

Food Corporation?

VERNON (CP) — A national agricultural corporation to level out food prices and encourage food self-sufficiency in Canada may soon be formed, an agriculture industry spokesman said Monday.

Richard Bullock of Kelowna, representative on the Canadian Agriculture Export Council, said such a corporation "will go a long way in levelling out the ups and downs in the price of many commodities throughout the country."

Insurer to Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyers for Great West Life said Monday the company will pay a $70,000 insurance policy on a Kelowna man who died following an airplane crash three years ago near Hope.

Lawyers for the firm said they do not agree with a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that the policy must be paid on the life of David Addington Chapman. However, they added the decision will not be appealed.

Chapman's small plane crashed in November, 1975, in rugged mountain country about 160 kilometres east of Vancouver. He was only slightly injured in the crash, but died when he tried to walk out from the crash site during a snowstorm.

Pen Probe Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prosecutor Charles Norris called Monday for a police investigation into the possibility that a British Columbia Penitentiary guard aided in an aborted prison break last year.

Convicted killer Andy Bruce, who took part in the escape attempt, told a B.C. Supreme Court trial last week that guard Konstantin Pondelicek agreed to hide a gun in the prison's visiting area in exchange for money and drugs.

Public Plea After Banks Firebombed

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has called on the citizens of Vancouver to provide police with any information they may have on the recent spate of firebombings in that city.

Gardom issued the public plea after two downtown banks were hit by the devices Monday. Damage was slight and there were no injuries.

Meanwhile, an unexploded firebomb, with a slightly-burned rag wick, was found in an alley behind a restaurant, bringing to 13 the number of incidents in recent weeks.

"The matter is of considerable concern," the attorney-general said in an interview.

He said, however, that the government would not get involved because it is a matter of police investigation.

"The police are taking every possible step and have some very good leads," he said.

In the first two incidents, involving a branch of the Royal Bank and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, bricks were thrown through the bank windows, followed by Molotov cocktails.

More than 25 detectives, crime specialists and fire department personnel have been assigned full-time to the bombings.

Financial institutions, government offices and Vancouver city hall have been hit by Molotov cocktails, while the headquarters of the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit was strafed with rifle fire.

There have been no injuries.

Skiers Are Flirting With Disaster

By ROGER SMITH
Canadian Press

VANCOUVER — Some rely on the latest technology and others count on intuition, but most experts agree that the avalanche danger is so extreme this winter that skiers could find a date with disaster on almost any mountain in southern British Columbia.

The warnings, however, are probably not as effective a deterrent as the rash of avalanche fatalities in the last two weeks. Eleven people have died in four separate incidents, and that figure could go higher before snow conditions improve.

Geoff Freer, co-ordinator of the provincial highway ministry's anti-avalanche program, says extreme avalanche dangers are not isolated this winter in the province's southeast and northwest.

"This year you could take the whole south of the province from Prince George down, all the way from the Rockies to the Coast."

Freer said Monday that the main problem is depth hoar, an underlying layer of snow which lets everything on top of it slide.

The condition began developing during a long stretch of clear, cold weather across the province in December and January. Heavy snow in February fell on a thin base which had crystallized and had little cohesive force. When the new snow begins to slide, there is nothing to hold it.

"If you stacked up upside down paper cups with only the corners touching, this is what you see at that level in the snow pack," he said. "What we'd like to have are round crystals with lots of points of contact."

Experts can predict that underlying weakness by monitoring weather conditions and find it by taking snow profiles — literally digging a hole and studying the various layers.

"It (depth hoar) will run out of the snow pack like sugar, like shovelled grain. It's that loose, there's so little cohesion."

With the snow so ready to go, it sometimes takes only the presence of a skier to set off a slide. That's why Freer says skiers should stay out of any area they, or a guide, don't know well.

"It's a good winter to be cautious."

Going one step farther, Peter Schaerer, a National Research Council avalanche expert, says skiers can't count on past experience.

"A skier might remember that he's never seen an avalanche on a particular slope, but this might just be the year it will go. It's a winter for unusual things to happen."

This year's string of avalanche fatalities started on Valentine's Day when seven skiers were killed just after a helicopter dropped them off for a run down a bowl area in the Purcell Range south of Golden. Avalanches last week killed one skier at Mount Mackenzie, another at Whistler Mountain and two more at Kootenay National Park.

The avalanches have also wrought havoc with the province's roads and rail lines.

Major highways have been temporarily closed and traffic has been halted on all main rail lines. The CP Rail line near the Rogers Pass was closed for a week earlier this month when a snowslide shifted a 35-metre bridge from its abutments.

There have been greater avalanche disasters in the past. One in the mid 1960s killed 26 persons in a northern B.C. mining camp and seven persons died in a 1974 slide near Terrace. This year, the slides have been mainly in high mountain bowls affecting skiers, said Schaerer.

One reason for that is the greater effort that goes into predicting and preventing avalanches that threaten roads or communities. Freer's crews sometimes close roads and use 105-millimetre howitzers or gas-propelled explosives to bring down small avalanches before big ones build up.

The same techniques are used at ski areas, but some veteran mountaineers say intuition must be a factor as well.

Hans Gmoser, a pioneer of helicopter skiing whose Canadian Mountain Holiday Ltd. helicopters operate out of seven locations in southeastern B.C., said his outfit "was strictly flying by the seat of the pants" when it started in 1965, but now uses all the latest techniques.

"But after skiing all day, you cut into the slope and you either feel good about it or you don't. After all is said and done, 60 per cent is intuition."

Schaerer, who says he's been involved in more avalanches than he cares to talk about, said most avalanches in skiing areas would involve between 1,000 and 10,000 tons of snow ripping down a mountain at about 100 kilometres an hour.

"The one that killed those skiers in Golden was probably about 100,000 tons but that was unusual."

Can Do Little: Chabot

Parks Minister Jim Chabot said Monday there is little he can do to take the risks out of helicopter skiing, and he does not propose to put an end to it.

Chabot said that as with hang-gliding, anybody who takes up helicopter skiing knows there are risks involved, and there is little he or his officials can do to remove those risks.

Avalanches on B.C. ski slopes claimed three more victims during the weekend, bringing to at least 10 the number of skiers killed by avalanches in the province during the past two weeks.

Chabot said parks officials are studying the question of safety standards for helicopter skiing, and he will be meeting with helicopter ski guides and operators next month.

No Costs Rapped By Judge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Federal Court judge has criticized prosecutors for failing to ask for court costs after he decided in favor of the Crown in a case involving North Vancouver gun collector Michael J. (Machine-gun) Martinoff.

Judge G. A. Addy said the abandonment of claims for costs "probably stems from the general feeling in our contry today that public monies belong to everybody and may therefore be dispensed with largesse to any member of the public."

The Crown did not ask for costs after a trial last week in which Martinoff sought a firearms acquisition certificate without payment of the $10 fee.

Martinoff, who got his nickname because of court battles over possession of fully-automatic weapons, wanted to buy a hunting rifle.

The regulations call for a certificate which costs $10 unless the purchaser requires a firearm to hunt or trap in order to sustain himself or his family.

Martinoff argued that because he and his mother ate any game he shot, he was within the exemption but Judge Addy ruled that neither he nor his mother needed the game meat to subsist and could well afford other foods.

Building Access Urged

University of Victoria Alma Mater Society wants Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf to make public buildings more accessible to the handicapped.

In a letter, the society and UVic's Committee for Equal Rights for the Disabled request the immediate release of two studies concerned with problems the handicapped have entering and leaving public buildings.

The two studies, are Proposed Changes in the B.C. Building Code, completed three years ago according to AMS president Dave Connell, and The Study of Accessibility for the Physically Disabled.

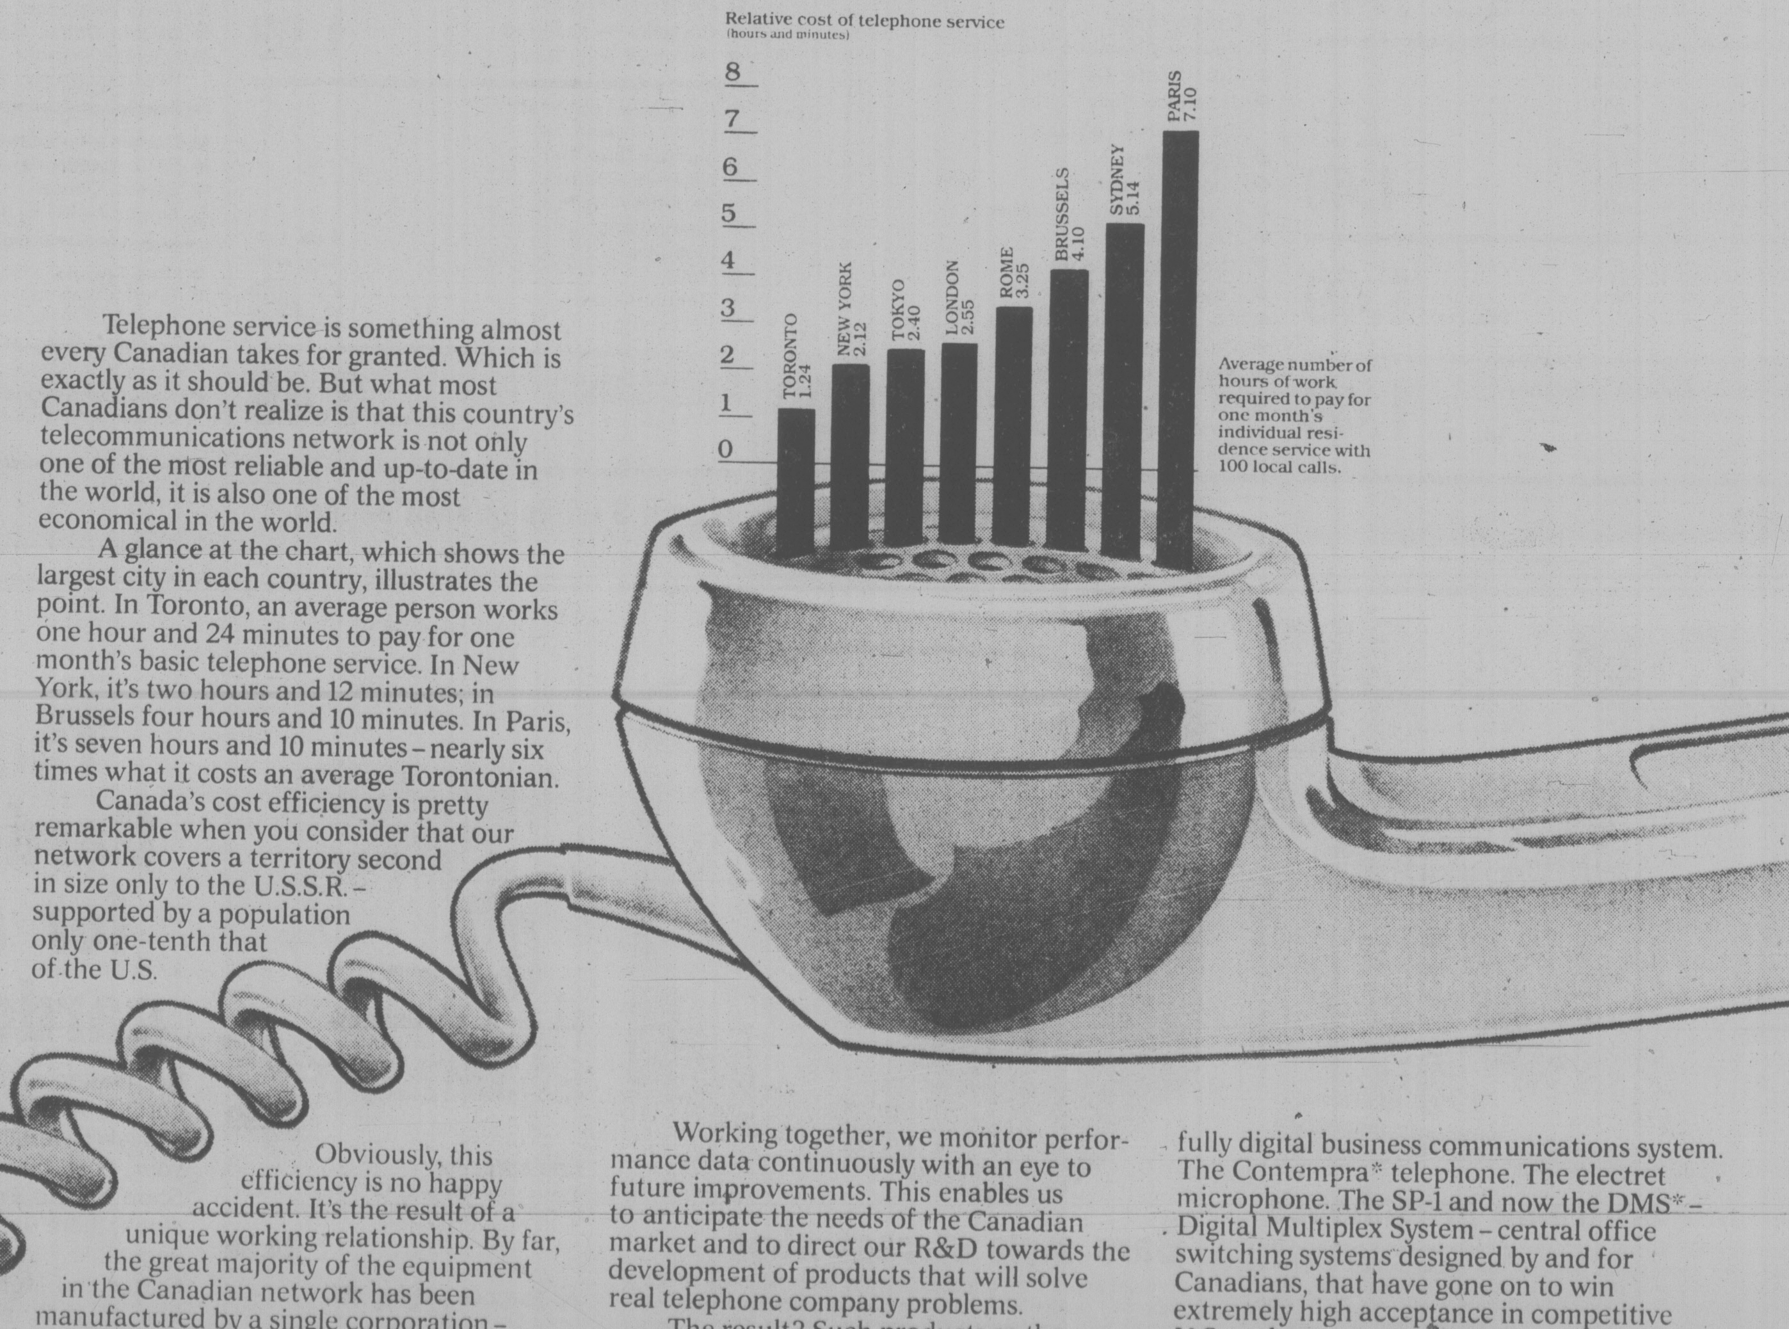
Proposed changes in the building code include alterations wich would make all public buildings in the province accessible to the disabled, Connell said.

"In order to provide more equal access to public buildings and greater equality of opportunity for employment it is esential that this building code is implemented," his letter said.

Connell said it is essential the study on accessiblity of public buildings and institutions be released so assessment work can begin.

The studies are bogged down in the red tape of the ministry of deregulation, Connell said

When it comes to telecommunications, nobody does it like Canada. And nobody gets more for their money.



Telephone service is something almost every Canadian takes for granted. Which is exactly as it should be. But what most Canadians don't realize is that this country's telecommunications network is not only one of the most reliable and up-to-date in the world, it is also one of the most economical in the world.

A glance at the chart, which shows the largest city in each country, illustrates the point. In Toronto, an average person works one hour and 24 minutes to pay for one month's basic telephone service. In New York, it's two hours and 12 minutes; in Brussels four hours and 10 minutes. In Paris, it's seven hours and 10 minutes – nearly six times what it costs an average Torontonian.

Canada's cost efficiency is pretty remarkable when you consider that our network covers a territory second in size only to the U.S.S.R. – supported by a population only one-tenth that of the U.S.

Obviously, this efficiency is no happy accident. It's the result of a unique working relationship. By far, the great majority of the equipment in the Canadian network has been manufactured by a single corporation – Northern Telecom Canada. In concert with our research and development subsidiary, Bell-Northern Research, we consult with all Canadian telephone companies almost on a daily basis.

Working together, we monitor performance data continuously with an eye to future improvements. This enables us to anticipate the needs of the Canadian market and to direct our R&D towards the development of products that will solve real telephone company problems.

The result? Such products as the Northern Telecom SL*-1, the world's first fully digital business communications system. The Contempra* telephone. The electret microphone. The SP-1 and now the DMS* – Digital Multiplex System – central office switching systems designed by and for Canadians, that have gone on to win extremely high acceptance in competitive U.S. and overseas markets.

Each new product, each new improvement, that we develop in response to the needs of Canada's telephone companies means that Canadians will continue to get more for their money. And that's something that should never be taken for granted.

Carpenters Want to Plaster Labor Code Loophole

Building contractors are using a loophole in the B.C. labor code to ignore union certifications and collective agreements, the Provincial Council of Carpenters said Monday.

In a report presented to Labor Minister Allan Williams, the council says contractors are able to set up "dummy" operations to avoid dealing with unions. The council is chartered by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The dummy firms are easily established under the law and delays following complaints by labor to the B.C. Labor Relations Board is appalling, the council says.

It warns that if the problem is not resolved there will be a deterioration of the labor relations climate in the construction industry.

The council says the labor code should be amended so unions have the right to picket non-union employers who are violating the labor code or collective agreements. Filing complaints has proven ineffective and has provided workers little protection, the council says.

The carpenters want the complaints process overhauled and the loopholes allowing the setting up of dummy companies to be closed.

They also want the provincial government to pass legislation that would require all governmet contracts to be let only to unionized firms.

"Clearly the situation must change," the report says. "Our union cannot and will not stand by while contractors are able to cheat our members out of work and the labor relations board allows it to happen."

TOWN TALK

Recent animalistic exhibitions by patrons of the University of Victoria's campus pub put some wear and tear on the decor and almost resulted in closure, but Alma Mater Society manager Dave Clode says things are begining to cool down.

He threatened to close the pub permanently after a bus shelter was damaged during a recent Friday night brawl.

The brawl capped a series of riotous antics that put two people in hospital and broke windows and doors in the Student Union Building.

The AMS will not hire bouncers and hopes the students themselves will help quell future disturbances.

And speaking of the SUB Pub . . . a Town Talk agent who visited the establishment was shocked by the crass, institutional and totally unimaginative decor of the place.

Bare tables, bleak brick dividing walls and no pictures. Indeed there is not a spark of creativity or taste in the entire pub area — and this on a university campus where imagination is supposed to flourish!

The place seems designed to withstand a maximum amount of abuse and consequently looks like a bomb shelter. Could it be the atmosphere is at least partly to blame for the behavior of patrons.

MacMillan Park's famed Cathedral Grove near Port Alberni is in no danger of being logged, says provincial parks director Tom Lee.

Rumors have been circulating recently that MacMillan Bloedel has been expressing interest in logging some of the giant old Douglas Firs that are the main attraction of the park.

"No suggestion like that has ever come on my desk," said Lee. "If it did you'd hear me screaming."

Lee said the rumors could have started because M-B has been logging in a valley behind the park.

Something about a birth announcement in the Times from the Mackie family seems to suggest that there's a hockey nut involved.

The announcement begins: "On Feb. 9 while hockey fans everywhere thrilled to the NHL stars' initial Challenge Cup victory over Team Russia, Sharon and Lorne cheered the triumphant arrival of their own splendid rookie superstar . . ."

However, if the birth in question had occurred on either one of two subsequent dates, the thrills and triumph would have been confined strictly to home ice.

A Saturday night crib tournament for employees of the James Bay Safeway store and their spouses became something of a Safeway "special."

Bob Fowles drew a perfect 29 hand, which he says is so unusual as to be a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

But the evening held a second surprise. Two hours later Bob was in another game when cashier Lynn Clark had her own 29.

In the 34-player tournament he placed second, she third.

Those two hard-working women who raised over $800 late last year for the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter at Mill Bay are back at it again.

City hall's self-styled watchdog Joe Richards has come up with many an idea to improve the administration of the city of Victoria, but the one he suggested last week is so simple it's amazing someone hasn't thought of it before.

Richards noted that a leading cause of traffic accidents is drivers running yellow lights. Instead of constant campaigns to make drivers stop faster, he said, why not just lengthen the time of the yellow light from the current four seconds to, perhaps, six. That way drivers would almost always clear the intersection even if they had started across on the yellow.

Traffic chairman Ald. Bill McElroy promised to look into the possibility.

They Want To Know

Parent Finders

The Risky, Relentless Quest Goes On

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The four women sit around a table in the modest duplex. They are very different, yet in an unusual way there are strong similarities.

They all belong to Parent Finders, a group of adopted adults, blood relatives and adopting parents.

They are all participating in a common search . . . for a natural parent.

Two have succeeded. Two are still hoping.

One still waiting is Robyn Wallace. All she has found out to date is that her mother was English, 17, unmarried and lived on a Saskatchewan farm.

Unlike the other three, she was not adopted. She lived with an aunt for three years until the aunt died. She then went from one foster home to another until at 14 she was out on her own earning 43 cents an hour as a waitress.

Wallace says, while there are more women than men searching for relatives, there are still many men who feel the need to search for their beginnings.

Shirley Griffith has been searching for five years. All she has found out in those years is that her parents lived in Vancouver, were separated in 1947 and that her mother "went to the courts and tried to fight for me" but was considered too unstable to have her.

"They're just worried I'm going to get hurt."

Wallace, 38, says she would respect her mother's wishes if she should find her and discover for whatever reason, such as marriage and another family, that the reunion was not wanted. But she has to know.

Barbara Trowsdale and Annette Smith-Dalrymple consider themselves the lucky ones. Their searches were successful but fraught with frustration and made almost impossible by denied information.

"We have no medical backgrounds. I didn't have any idea of what kind of a bloodline I was handing down," Trowsdale says, looking at her small son John on her lap.

Trowsdale says her adoptive parents also were afraid she would get hurt but she found her sister and mother after a two-year search and says the bonds with her adoptive parents are more secure than ever.

Her search was made easier by the fact she knew her father had drowned. An account of the drowning on Feb. 13, 1961, was her first important clue.

Smith-Dalrymple was born in the Alaskan fishing village of Naknek. There were four older children. Her father, who had a violent temper, didn't believe she was his so she was put up for adoption.

"I was reunited with my father on Valentine Day, 1976. He knew he had been wrong for 23 years," she says.

Her search cost her $1.000 in legal fees and she still has to go to Washington to get her birth certificate.

Although their search is over, she and Trowsdale are avid supporters of Parent Finders, which has its national and provincial headquarters in Vancouver where the organization was formed in August, 1974.

Members help each other search for their parents and a large registry being compiled in Vancouver grows almost daily.

"There are an awful lot of us," Trowsdale says. "There are 398,000 adoptees in Canada so it is not surprising that it has grown so fast."

The B.C. Parent Finders recently presented a brief to the provincial government's children's legislative committee asking that all pertinent medical history of the biological family and obstetrical history be made available to adoptive parents. It also asked for a system to obtain on-going medical information.

At present the records give only birth information and a report on the child within six months before adoption.

Parent Finders say new legislation must recognize blood ties.

"With the release of relevant information to adult adoptees, they would then know whether there were any blood ties with an intended spouse," says Norma Robinson of Port Coquitlam, provincial president.

The purpose of the provincial government's proposed Family and Child Services Act is to protect children from neglect and abuse and to provide assistance to families where the normal development of children is at risk.

"Yet the Adoption Act is only once mentioned as part of a list of related legislation," Robinson says.

"We are all children," Trowsdale says of adoptees, "I would have wanted to find my mother — even if she was an ex-con or a prostitute.

"Thanks to the love and understanding of my adoptive parents my own search took two years but had a very happy ending."

Creek Spillage Tracked Down

An oil spill in Colquitz Creek Monday was caused by heating oil from an overfilled tank at the Parkside Place condominium complex, according to a spokesman for the Pollution Control Branch.

PCB regional manager Bill Thomas said the tank was overfilled Sunday by an oil company trank, and the excess oil entered a storm culvert to pour into the creek at the rate of about half a gallon a minute.

He said the manager of the apartment building across the road from the creek would be asked to arrange construction of a small dike around the tank's filling spout, to prevent further incidents.

Saanich municipal workers placed absorbent material in the creek Monday afternoon, to catch the oil still flowing from the storm drain.

A biologist working to restock the Colquitz and other Saanich creeks with fish said such spills pose a danger to the sports fishery program.

Labor Rally At Buildings Up in Air

The B.C. Federation of Labor has had to change its plans for a demonstration this month in Victoria to protest recent changes to essential services legislation.

The federation had planned to hold a demonstration in conjunction with the opening of the spring session of the legislature, but since there has been no announcement of when the session will begin, the labor body is trying to arrange another course of action.

Joy Langan, who is organizing the essential services rallies, said Monday the federation has written to the government asking for a meeting with the cabinet.

The labor body would use the occasion to present a brief on the essential services question.

So far, the federation hasn't heard back from the government, Langan said.

She wouldn't say whether there will be a demonstration at the Legislative Buildings the same day federation officers meet the cabinet.

There have been seven rallies so far and the next one is planned for March 7 in Vancouver.

The federation organized the rallies to protest a government move late last year placing all public sector employees under the umbrella of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Organized labor feels that action effectively removes free collective bargaining rights from 34,000 public employees in the province.

Labor leaders have been warning those attending the rallies to date that the Socred administration's action is just the first step toward right-to-work legislation which would allow employees to work anywhere in the province and not have to join a union.

Trustees Grind It Out . . . Slowly

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria school board wrangled for 2½ hours Monday night but only scratched a weighty agenda before the 10:30 adjournment deadline rolled around.

Chairman Carol Pickup told the board she had mailed letters to staff and community and parent groups inviting nominations for positions on the education commission.

She said she was asked by planning committee chairman Win Mott to send letters to the Greater Victoria Teachers Association, Canadian Union of Public Employees, students councils, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Confederation of Parent Associations inviting nominations to the commission.

Local parent-teacher associations were added to the list Monday at the request of Trustee Peter Yorke, who said the invitations had been sent secretly to select groups without board knowledge.

The board will meet tonight to select a salaried commissioner to co-ordinate the $15,000 study.

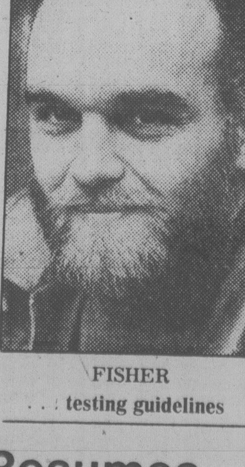
The commission will conduct an in-depth study of district needs and resources. It is expected to complete by October a report that will include future planning recommendations.

After a long debate, the board decided to establish guidelines for district-wide testing, a motion made by Trustee Dr. Mark Fisher.

He said tests should be used as tools to evaluate the core curriculum, rather than for punishment or promotion of students.

He said in a notice of motion that district standards should be established for each grade in reading, math, oral communications and written communication.

The only way to measure the effectiveness of the core curriculum is to know what students should be capable of achieving in each grade, said Fisher, who described the present system as a "stone-age process."



FISHER
. . . testing guidelines

Standards and testing in the district lack cohesiveness, he charged.

"It's a dog's breakfast."

Fisher said administration should determine how district test results will be used to improve the curriculum to meet educational standards.

After another lengthy debate on a provincial government enrichment program for gifted students the board unanimously decided to apply to become ivolved in it.

The experimental project will be implemented in September in B.C. school districts showing the most interest.

Trustee Martin Levin, who made the notice of motion, said learning disabled students rightly receive attention and money and it's time school districts provided challenging programs to stimulate bright students.

Trustee Winn Mott said it would be a great waste not to implement the program.

"One of the failings of the public school system is its enshrinement of the mediocre," he commented.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables said Greater Victoria already has trained teachers to provide programs for gifted students and that the district leads the province in scholarship.

Stables told trustees he didn't want them to think Victoria is the "backwater of the world and that your children have been learning in spite of the education system.

There is no guarantee the education ministry will have the supplementary curriculum for gifted students ready by September, he said.

Although the ministry will supply the curriculum and texts, the district would probably have to foot the bill for training teachers and for field trips, according to Stables.

Trustee John Young, who didn't vote, said gifted kids are winners who don't need extra help.

"They win all the scholarships, they go on to university; they win everything," Young said.

Fired Ferry Captain Arbitration Resumes

An arbitration hearing into the firing of a B.C. Ferry Corp. captain resumed today in Vancouver.

The hearing, which began in Victoria in January, had been adjourned pending a decision by the B.C. Court of Appeal on an application by the corporation to have a Powell River newspaper editor fined or jailed for refusing to disclose her sources.

The court hearing was postponed indefinitely earlier this month but is scheduled to resume March 19.

The ferry corporation is asking the court to rule against Wendy Fitzgibbons, 31, editor of the Powell River News for refusing to disclose the source of a story about a ferry docking collision about 30 kilometres south of Powell River last September.

The collision first was blamed on mechanical malfunction, but following an internal inquiry into the incident the corporation fired Captain Gerry Stalling, master of the Queen of the Islands.

Ask the Times

Q. A friend and I were shelling some mussels when we discovered that a number of them had crabs imbedded in their meat. These were normal crabs, thumbnail in in size, each draped around a mass of small orange eggs. My friend says the crabs were laying the eggs, using the mussels as host environment. I say the mussels were laying the eggs, and the crabs were feeding on them. Who is right? A.J.C.

A. Your friend. The crabs are known as pea crabs. They actually live the-year-round in the mussel and lay their eggs in their host but don't seem to harm it. The crab larvae will eventually leave the mussel. It won't feed on the latter.

business

HBC Mining

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd. of Toronto earned $4.1 million dollars last year despite losses by two of its United States subsidiaries.

The company announced 1978 earnings of $4,123,000 or 41 cents a share compared with $4,278,000 or 42 cents a share for 1977.

For the fourth quarter, Hudson Bay Mining reported earningss of $438,000 or five cents a share compared with a loss of $512,000 or five cents a share for the same quarter a year ago.

Results for the fourth quarter were reduced by a charge of $970,000 to conform with new Canadian accounting standards which normally would have been spread over the entire year.

The company's Canadian metal operations made a substantial contribution to profits, reflecting higher prices for base metals, particularly copper.

Finning

Finning Tractor and Equipment Ltd. reported net income of $14,769,000 or $3.72 a share for 1978.

This compares with $12,002,000 or $3.02 a share for the previous year.

Gross revenue was up 16.7 per cent, to $287,933,000 from $246,761,000.

Noranda

Noranda Mines Ltd. reports profit of $135.2 million for 1978, up from $71.8 million in 1977, thanks largely to the weak Canadian dollar.

The dollar averaged 87 cents in 1978 against 94 cents in 1977, the company said.

"As a rough estimate, each one-cent decline adds $5 million to annual after-tax profit and while there is a partial offset due to the need to revalue short-term, foreign-currency debts, it is clear that much of the improvement in earnings was the result of the reduced value of the Canadian dollar," Noranda said.

The company said its forest products and mining and metallurgical operations showed strong gains and offset a decline in profits from manufacturing.

Per-share earnings for 1978 were $5.72 compared with $3.04 a year earlier.

The company says it experienced an abnormal expense of $9.8 million because of the first-quarter shutdown of its United States aluminum reduction plant due to a coal strike. This was more than offset, however, by a $10.7 million gain on the sale of two sawmills in British Columbia in the third quarter.

OFFICE MANAGEMENT SERVICES
SALARY: $28,000 PLUS

Our client—one of British Columbia's largest and most progressive educational systems located in the Central Interior and employing some 1,600 educational and administrative support staff on behalf of a 22,000 student enrollment is seeking an experienced MANAGER OF OFFICE SUPPORT SERVICES capable of providing decisive coordination and direction to an unusually wide range of general administrative programs. Reflecting the diversity of operations, primary emphasis will centre on the supervision of approximately 165 clerical staff including work activity procedural flow, office organization, physical layout, central filing and records systems, printing and reproduction services, word processing and related equipment and buildings administration.

Candidates interested in this unique and challenging career opportunity should possess several years diversified management experience in office administration possibly acquired within one of the larger insurance, mortgage or real estate firms or in a government environment employing large numbers of clerical support staff. RSP options explained

Well, here's the place to get it—Montreal Trust, one of Canada's longest established trust companies.

We have people who know how to explain RSP's clearly and concisely. We'll tell you about all the different options available to you. And what they mean in terms of interest, taxes and retirement benefits.

With a Montreal Trust RSP, you can choose from five different investment sections (including the Mortgage section—not available with most RSP's), and invest in some or all of them. You can transfer from one section to another to take advantage of market trends. You can even choose your own portfolio of securities, if you wish, with a Self-Directed RSP.

At Montreal Trust your money starts working fast. And, unlike many RSP's, there's no entry fee.

But there's not enough room here to tell the full story. Why not drop in at your nearest branch, and we'll explain the whole thing.

Remember, you must invest before March 1st if you wish to claim your contribution on your 1978 tax return.

No U.K. Election Callaghan Firm

Times News Services

LONDON — Prime Minister James Callaghan said Monday night he will hold off calling a general election as long as possible despite pressure on his minority government because of the country's pay revolt.

In a television interview, Callaghan said: "The five-year term of this Parliament runs out in October to November 1979 — that is the proper time for an election."

"I thought we should try to see it through, that is still my view," he said. A general election must be held by Nov. 15.

But despite the strikes that have plagued British services and industry throughout the winter, Callaghan gave the impression that he feels the country had passed the turning point in its industrial strife.

He said that although recent pay settlements were far in excess of the government's five-per-cent guidelines, inflation will be less than he had feared.

Callaghan said the issue is whether the country is going back to 20- to 30-per-cent inflation, adding: "I now believe we are going to escape that dreadful fate. The increase is slower than last

Meanwhile, authorities said Monday that Britain lost thousands of dollars in duties during Friday's strike of customs agents, but they are more worried about who, or what, might have come into the country during the 24-hour walkout.

It was acknowledged that despite a close watch by detectives, a smuggler would have run few risks.

"We are extremely worried about the number of drug smugglers, jewel thieves and other assorted villains who have got into London after being tipped off about the strike," a senior police officer told The Daily Mail.

Customs officers take an estimated $6,000 a day at Heathrow's incoming Terminal 3, and $3,000 at Terminals 1 and 2. But Bill Adams, an official of the Civil and Public Services Association at the airport, said: "I doubt if the customs got a penny."

Honesty boxes brought smiles. They are boxes into which travellers were invited to leave details of what they had brought into the country so they could be billed later for duty.

"You must be joking," was the kind of comment dropped in the boxes. At Liverpool, boxes were opened after a hundred travellers arrived by sea from Dublin. There was not even a sarcastic note inside.

Nazi Riot Flares At Klan Exhibit

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Ku Klux Klan and four men in Nazi uniforms shouting "White power, white power" confronted an opposing crowd yelling "Ku Klux Klan — scum of the land," forcing police to close an exhibit of Klan paraphernalia at the public library.

More than 20 policemen moved into the tiny auditorium of the Forsyth County Public Library when the shouting match erupted 45 minutes after the one-day exhibit opened Monday night.

Waldheim Namibia Plan

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim offered a plan for Namibia on Monday that would establish a UN presence in the South African-controlled territory by mid-March.

A tentative lineup disclosed by sources show six countries — Finland, Romania, Panama, Ghana, the Sudan and Bangladesh — providing regular troops for the force.

There were reports that some late changes may be made in the troop alignment with Tunisia replacing the Sudan and India taking Bangladesh's place.

South Yemen Takes 3 Towns

ADEN (AP) — The Marxist government of South Yemen said today it captured the three North Yemeni towns on their border and expressed willingness to accept Arab mediation in the border war with its pro-Western neighbor.

"The government of Democratic Yemen reiterates its readiness to respond to any call by any sisterly Arab state, addressed to both parties, or by the Arab League, for an ending of the state of war," the foreign ministry said.

North Yemen asked for an urgent meeting of the 22-member Arab League, and reports from Cairo said the League will send an investigating committee to area.

South Yemeni officials said fighting continued following the capture of Harib, 150 kilometres southeast of the North Yemeni capital, San'a. South Yemen said earlier that its forces captured the two other towns just inside the North Yemeni border, Qatabah, about 80 kilometres north of the South Yemeni capitel, Aden, and El Beida, about 100 kilometres east of Qatabah.

You'll be working with the Ministry of Labour to create summer jobs that provide opportunities for B.C. students and unemployed youth to learn work skills. It's a simple system that requires a minimum of paperwork yet lets you help yourself and the economy in a positive way. British Columbia businesses of all kinds and sizes can benefit. Once your application is approved, you're free to hire any eligible young person or take advantage of the Ministry of Labour's computerized referral service to locate an employee with the talent and interest you require. But act today. The program is available for a limited time only. Should your situation change in the meantime, you are under no obligation. Here's how it works:

BUSINESSES AND FARMS — If your business or farm has been in operation for at least a year, the Ministry of Labour will help you pay the wages of up to five young people this summer. We will pay between $1.30 and $2.50 an hour as our share of the cost.

SOCIETIES — You are invited to apply for funding for any worthwhile project that provides an opportunity for young people to learn valuable job skills this summer. From Chemotherapy to Relief by Pot . . .

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — At age 54, with chemotherapy treatments playing havoc with her body, Corleen Hapeman spent whole days in bed. That is, until a mysterious brown paper bag appeared on her doorstep two years ago.

At first, she gingerly put aside the contents, but a month later, her vision hazy, her hair falling out and suffering from diarrhea and loss of appetite, she gave in.

Inside, she found a small plastic bag of marijuana, a corn cob pipe and a newspaper clipping about the therapeutic effect of marijuana on chemotherapy's nausea. She thought about her doctor's advice: try marijuana.

Then Mrs. Hapeman smoked her first pipeful of pot.

"I did it because I wanted to go to this Christmas party so badly," she said. "I had felt terrible all day and decided to give it a try. I put on a new dress, enjoyed the food and slept all night. That was the beginning."

Mrs. Hapeman says marijuana worked for her during her year of chemotherapy and now she wants it to be available to others. She has embarked on a one-woman crusade to get the drug legalized in Washington for medical purposes, as it is in Illinois, Florida, Louisiana and New Mexico.

The state House of Representatives last week approved such a bill 88-8, but the measure must go to the Senate and then to the desk of Gov. Dixy Lee Ray.

In recent weeks, Mrs. Hapeman has hit the radio and talk show circuit, has been interviewed in dozens of newspapers and has talked to almost every state legislator about the subject. She has gathered thousands of signatures in support of the bill.

Tests in the fall of 1977 showed that Mrs. Hapeman had breast cancer that was spreading to her left arm, shoulder and chest. That November she moved to the Seattle area and began taking chemotherapy 14 days a month.

After she started smoking pot, the mysterious doorstep deliveries continued, almost one a month. When her treatments stopped a few months ago, she quit smoking.

Mrs. Hapeman said she never plans to start again since doctors recently told her the cancer had stopped spreading.

She said she still did not know who was responsible for supplying her with the pot, only that it was "someone who loves me very much."

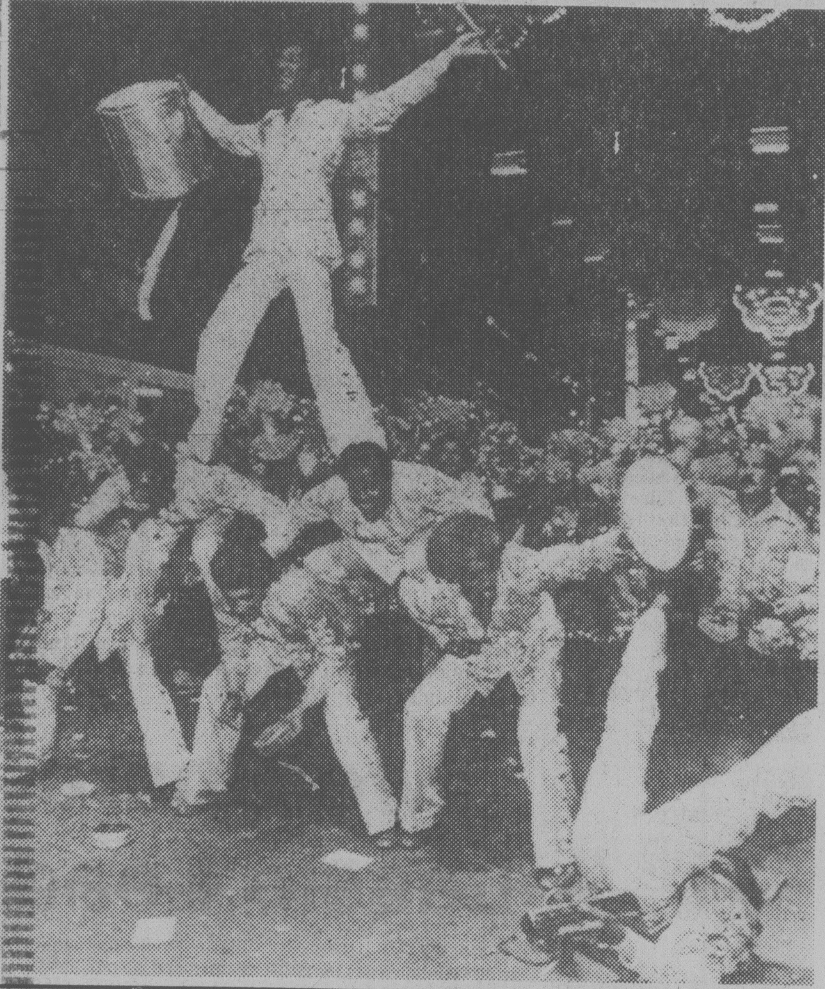
Hairy Chest the Sign Of a He-Man Drinker?

VIENNA (Reuter) — A hairy chest is the sign of a man who knows how to hold his liquor, a Vienna doctor told a conference on wine and health Monday.

Men with hairy chests get drunk less easily than their smooth-skinned brothers, said Dr. Heribert Thaler, a specialist in internal medicine.

Women, for some medically unknown reason, can drink only one-third of a man's daily limit before they begin to endanger their health, he added.

Dr. Thaler said his studies show men can safely drink one bottle (0.7 litres) of wine daily, while women should stop at one-third of a bottle (0.25 litres) if they want to avoid serious liver damage.



DANCING PYRAMID of samba dancers was one of the highlights of 12-hour parade marking the Rio Carnival in Brazilian capital Monday. The dancers come from samba schools all over the country.

Chev Engine Deal Voided

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. federal appeals court Monday threw out a $34-million settlement for persons who unknowingly bought Oldsmobiles with Chevrolet engines.

The court said the federal judge who approved the settlement failed to exercise enough control over negotiations.

The settlement, agreed to by General Motors and 47 U.S. state attorneys-general, provided that GM give $200 cash to each of the 66,782 persons who bought 1977 Oldsmobiles equipped with Chevrolet engines. The settlement also included extended warranty privileges.

In rejecting the settlement, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals opened the door to individual suits by the car owners.

The U.S. district court settlement, approved by Judge Frank McGarr, has not been acted upon by GM while it appealed the decision.

The appeals court also said the settlement was unacceptable because it offered car owners little recourse but to accept the $200 and extended warranty.

The suit challenging the district court's decision was filed as a class action for all purchasers of such vehicles.

Bootleg Milk In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Milk was nearly gone in the New York metropolitan area Monday in the second day of a strike by the teamsters union against 85 dairies that serve 10 million consumers.

Bootleg operators brought in some supplies from New Jersey and to a lesser degree from Pennsylvania and Connecticut, despite state and city trade and health regulations that made the shipments illegal.

A run on milk touched off by announcement of the strike Saturday had cleaned milk and milk products from the shelves of most stores throughout the city, Long Island and southern Westchester County.

Picket lines were set up at each of the struck dairies. In addition to ordinary milk, the strike cut off supplies of cream, skimmed milk, some cheeses, some yogurt and the ice cream mix used by some restaurants, industry officials said.

Mediation was to resume today between Teamsters Local 584, representing the 2,000 striking plant employees and drivers, and the Greater New York Milk Dealers.

Sparky in Yankee Pinstripes? Magic Merger Seems Inevitable

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Sparky Anderson in New York Yankees' pinstripes in 1980 — a marriage made in heaven, George's heaven?

Count Billy Martin out as a returning prodigal son.

Pillowy, pleasant Bob Lemon can't wait to get out of the dugout and those silly high socks and long pants. His tenure as interim manager of baseball's most successful and volatile franchise is finished after this season — win, lose or draw. He insists on it.

So what does that leave? A rich, talent-loaded baseball team without a skipper and a highly-respected, winning field general without a rein. Put them together and you've got powerful chemistry.

This magic merger appears inevitable to anyone studying the shifting winds and the strange vagaries of the personalities involved.

When Anderson was unceremoniously fired by Cincinnati Reds last November, despite a record of four National League championships and two World Series titles, owner George Steinbrenner of the Yankees called it "the biggest booboo of the year."

Anderson is Steinbrenner's kind of guy — dignified, inspirational, strictly Marine spit-and-polish with a fetish for short hair, shaven chins and intense team pride.

He doesn't stray too far from George's conception of America as "Kate Smith, apple pie and Yankee pinstripes," although Sparky may have to swallow hard to digest the last one.

While Sparky is fulfilling the final year of his Cincinnati contract with menial jobs, Steinbrenner and Martin are back in the pits again — exchanging barbs and innuendoes.

How can these two mavericks — each strong-willed and impetuous — ever find a common ground for a harmonious relationship?

They can't. It's obvious Steinbrenner has girded himself with an escape hatch in promising to give Martin his job back "if he carries himself in a manner that dignifies the Yankees."

That's like telling a leopard to change his spots. Dignity is not Martin's long suit — never was and never will be. Steinbrenner knew that when he hired the fiesty firebrand as the Yankees' pilot in August, 1975.

Billy the Kid's record, first as player, then as manager of Minnesota Twins, Detroit Tigers and Texas Rangers, reads like a page from the Ring Record Book. He has spent his career feuding with players (often his own), bosses, the media and fans. He hasn't been reluctant to belt an antagonist when the situation warranted.

Martin's latest escapade involved a barroom incident in Reno, Nev., last November when Billy, charging provocation, admitted he slugged a reporter. The case is pending in court. The Yankees' brass contends there have been reports of other indiscretions.

Steinbrenner came close to firing Martin three times during the last two years. One of them occurred last July after one of Billy's frequent run-ins with Reggie Jackson. Beating the gun, Martin called a news conference and resigned — tearfully. The Yankees named Lemon as manager.

There was an outcry of protest from the fans, who idolized Martin. Five days after Martin's resignation, Steinbrenner announced dramatically at the Yankees' Old Timers' game that Martin would return in 1980. At the time, there was no suggestion of conditional clauses.

Some critics said Steinbrenner's motives were mercenary, that he reacted to appease the fans and cool press criticism. Those who know George best vow it's not true — the Yankees' owner, an old softie at heart, was moved by Billy's tears.

But compassion can run out. The Yankees' owner was visibly upset over Martin's appearance at training camp last week at which time he said he and agent Doug Newton were anxious to turn Steinbrenner's promises into firm commitments.

"Nobody's going to put pressure on anybody," Steinbrenner snapped. He said, in effect, that Billy must shape up or stay out. It's a rap the trigger-happy Martin can't beat.

'CARD' FOR VIKETTES, HONORS FOR VIKINGS

University of Victoria Vikings and Vikettes both received good news Monday after returning from a weekend on the Prairies.

Vikettes, who lost a playoff against Calgary Dinnies for the Canada West University Athletic Association women's basketball championship, learned Monday that they will join the Dinnies in national championship tournament. Vikettes were a unanimous selection as the "wild card" entry in the tourney.

Vikings, who swept a series against Calgary Dinnies to end the CWUAA men's basketball season, learned that two players, guard Rob Parris and forward Reni Dolcetti, were unanimous selections to the CWUAA all-star team.

Joining Parris and Dolcetti on the first team are guard Brent Patterson of Alberta, forward Pat Rooney of Alberta, and forward Pat Lee of Calgary.

Guards on the second team are Calgary's Paul Babcock and Victoria's Ian Hyde-Lay. Getting the nod as forwards are Bob Forsyth and John Doughty, both of British Columbia, and Lethbridge's Perry Mirkovich, who edged Dolcetti by two points to capture the league scoring title.

Mirkovich staged a remarkable scoring spree last weekend in Calgary, collecting 79 points in two games to finish with 383 points.That was enough for a two-point margin over Dolcetti, the season-long scoring leader who managed only 22 points in two games as the Vikings ended their 20-game schedule against Alberta.

Vikings will be at home to Calgary for the best-of-three playoff final, starting Friday at the McKinnon Gym.

KEN SHIELDS
. . . coach-of-year

Vikettes appeared likely to miss a berth in the national event when they dropped a 73-71 decision to Calgary in the deciding game of the best-of-three CWUAA final.

But this year the national tourney will be an eight-team affair, including both the host club and a wild-card selection.

Mario Likes The Canucks

Shutouts aren't the most important thing to Los Angeles Kings goaltender Mario Lessard, but he certainly doesn't mind chalking them up.

"I like shutouts, but it's more important that we win so the team can gain points," the Los Angeles rookie said Monday night after blanking Vancouver Canucks 2-0 in National Hockey League action at Los Angeles.

"I never look for a shutout, but if I get it, that's fine. If not, I want to win, anyway."

The shutout was the third of the season for Lessard and second against the Canucks. Los Angeles blanked Vancouver 4-0 here Dec. 30.

"They had 13 shots against me last time, and 24 this time," said Lessard. "They really challenged me when they had a two-man advantage in the third period."

Marcel Dionne, the NHL's third-leading scorer with 92 points, scored his 43rd goal of the season and assisted on Charlie Simmer's goal — both coming in the first period.

The victory enabled the Kings, 26-27-8, to regain second place from the idle Pittsburgh Penguins in the Norris Division. The Canucks, meanwhile, are second in the Smythe Division but have won just once in their last eight games and have a 19-33-9 record.

"It wasn't fancy, but we plugged away," said Kings coach Bob Berry. "It was kind of a snoozer, but it was a tight-checking game and Mario made the big saves for us."

In Buffalo, in a hard-hitting game that Toronto coach Roger Neilson described as playoff hockey saw Buffalo Sabres prove they, too, can play aggressively when it's necessary.

Led by Don Luce — who got Buffalo's first two goals and became the club's first 20-goal scorer — the Sabres beat the Leafs 3-1 to take over undisputed possession of second place in the Adams Division of the NHL.

DEEP IN THOUGHT, skip Myrna McQuarrie of Alberta ponders her future in women's curling championships after suffering 7-5 defeat at hands of Newfoundland's Ann Bartlett in third round at Montreal, Monday. (CP Wirephoto)

Two Share Lassie Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — Three rounds gave competitors in the Canadian women's curling championship a full day of activity today, but no one was better prepared for it than the entries from Quebec and Newfoundland.

Lorraine Bowes of the host province champions from Baie d'Urfe scrambled back to a 7-6 victory over Alberta in the fourth round Monday night to join Sue Ann Bartlett of Labrador City at 4-0 atop the 11-rink standings.

Bartlett downed previously-unbeaten Penny LaRocque of Halifax 8-4, sending the Nova Scotia crew to 3-1 and fourth place.

British Columbia, represented by North Vancouver's Lindsay Sparkes, was in third place, unbeaten at 3-0, after a 6-5 decision over Ontario's Pat Reid of Toronto.

"It's going to be tough," Bowes said. "I just hope we can hold in there and do our best. That's all. I feel the girls put it together tonight and that's great."

"Three 10-end games in a day are tough, especially for the skip. It's pretty tiring. I'm not that young anymore, you know. But we'll be in there. We'll take each as it comes and do our best."

Myrna McQuarrie's Alberta rink, 1977 Lassie winners, was a major hurdle for the Quebec crew.

"I thought hitting Alberta tonight would be our toughest game," Bowes said. "And yet we had a real tough game with the Territories in our first game Sunday. But this was by far the best win yet for us."

Other fourth-round games saw Saskatchewan's Barb Despins of Saskatoon down Manitoba's Chris Pidzarko of Stony Mountain 7-5 and the Territories' Margaret Whitlock of Hay River, N.W.T., beat Prince Edward Island's Elayne Thomson of Crapaud 8-4.

In the third round earlier Monday, Quebec downed Ontario 9-3, Newfoundland beat Alberta 7-5, B.C. whipped P.E.I. 8-1, Saskatchewan trounced New Brunswick, represented by Anne Orser of Bathurst, 11-2 and Nova Scotia dropped Manitoba 7-4.

Breakers for Sale To Portland Group

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Saskatoon Blades are coming but Ephraim Steinke's leaving may be of greater interest to some Western Hockey League followers at the moment.

Steinke, the one-time Kamloops contractor who shifted his hockey team from the British Columbia interior to Seattle, is ready to sell his interest in the Breakers.

Although Steinke refused to confirm or deny it Sunday, the change in ownership will take place at the end of the current campaign. For the Breakers, on the verge of being mathematically eliminated from the playoffs by both Victoria Cougars and New Westminster Bruins, season's end will be March 25.

Sale of the Seattle franchise, for a reported $375,000, is all but finalized. The deal will require league approval, considered only a matter of formality.

The purchasers are a Portland group headed by Tom Gauthier.

Cougars, meanwhile, already without the services of winger George Fritz and rookie defenceman Tony Feltrin because of injuries, learned that forward Brad Palmer will have to sit out tonight's game with Saskatoon. Palmer and New Westminster's Neil Meadmore both drew one-game suspensions for a head-butting incident during Saturday's fight-filled game at Memorial Arena.

Executive vice-president Del Wilson said Monday that other action is being considered and will be announced today.

Victoria coach Jack Shupe expressed surprise that no immediate action was taken against New Westminster defenceman Boris Fistric, who drew six minors, a misconduct and game misconduct in Saturday's game.

The game misconduct was Fistric's eighth of the season, said Shupe, and the big defenceman should have drawn an immediate one-game suspension. After five, each game misconduct means an automatic one-game sitout.

Shupe said that because the race for second place in the Western Division is so close (Cougars are one point ahead of the Bruins), he team president Paul Panchyschyn considered lodging a protest against New Westminster's 5-3 Sunday victory over Saskatoon.

The Cougars, however, didn't file a protest before the 24-hour deadline elapsed.

In Monday's only game, former Cougar Sid Giroux came through with two goals, including the winner, and Kelly Kisio fired his 49th and 50th of the season to power Calgary Wranglers to an 8-6 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings.

SHATTO DEPARTS THE ARGO SCENE

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts and their general manager, Dick Shatto, have mutually agreed to a parting.

The Canadian Football League club and the Hall-of-Famer announced Monday in a joint statement they had negotiated a final settlement of Shatto's three-year contract.

Lew Hayman, the 70-year-old all-time Argonaut who has been with the club in assorted capacities most of the time since 1933, has been directed by the new owners to reorganize the operation.

With authority to hire and fire in an effort to return the Grey Cup to Toronto for the first time since 1952, Hayman's first major move was last week when he signed Forrest Gregg as coach.

Bossy Rivals Other Greats

MONTREAL (CP) — Right winger Mike Bossy of New York Islanders was the toast of the National Hockey League last Saturday when he became only the third player in 57 years to score at least one goal in each of 10 consecutive league games.

Bossy accomplished the feat with two goals in the Islanders' 3-1 victory over the Red Wings in Detroit, but the streak was stopped the next day as New York Rangers prevented the league's top sophomore from getting a shot on goal as the Rangers edged the Islanders 3-2 at Madison Square Garden.

The record equalled by Bossy, a 22-year-old native of Montreal who was the Islanders' first choice in the 1977 draft, had belonged to Ranger great Andy Bathgate and Chicago Black Hawk superstar Bobby Hull.

Bathgate set the modern mark in the 1962-63 season and Hull equalled the feat in the 1968-69 campaign. Prior to Bathgate, no player had scored in 10 consecutive games since Harry (Punch) Broadbent got a goal in each of 16 straight games with Ottawa Sooners in 1921-22.

Bossy recorded the 100th goal of his short career Feb. 19 during an 8-3 triumph over the Kings in Los Angeles. The goal came in his 129th regular-season game, which meant he scored 100 goals in fewer games than anyone since 1920-21.

The Islander right winger's second goal in the game against Detroit Saturday was his 50th in his 58th game of the season and only three players have scored 50 in fewer games.

Guy Lafleur of Montreal is the NHL scoring leader with 99 points, while Bryan Trottier of the Islanders follows at 95. Marcel Dionne of the Kings had a goal and assist in the 2-0 Los Angeles victory over Vancouver Canucks Monday night to remain third with 92 points.

NEW PACT AT WESTERN HINGES ON CONTROL OF FUNDS

Back-Gate Money Causes VITRA Rift

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

A squabble over who gets the money from back-gate admissions paid by drivers and pit crew members at Western Speedway is threatening to drive a wedge between the track and the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association, governing body of stock car racing in the Victoria area for the past 28 years.

VITRA officials said Monday at a press conference in the Ingraham Hotel that unless differences with Western Speedway manager Tony Mortel and the track's directors are resolved by next Tuesday's membership meeting, the association won't race at the Langford oval this year.

It would mark the first time in the 25-year history of Western Speedway that it has not been associated with VITRA.

VITRA, with a membership of about 400, has 50 stock cars worth an estimated $250,000 under its banner.

Association president Danny Wade said Monday negotiations have already started with the Mid-Island Racing Association to have VITRA superstocks and stocks run this summer at Nanaimo's Grandview Bowl, a quarter-mile paved oval seating about 3,000.

A two-year contract between Western Speedway and VITRA ran out last season.

Wade said his organization has already yielded to demands by Mortel and speedway directors Geoff Vantreight and Lawrence Fox that race officials be hired by the track instead of VITRA.

The speedway would also have the right to bar drivers providing VITRA has equal representation at any trial concerning suspensions.

"VITRA, however, cannot let control of back-gate revenue go to the speedway," officials said in a prepared release. "The pit pass fee ($3.25 that each driver and crew member pays at the back gate to get into the track infield each race night) pays for competitors' insurance, supports the points fund and helps pay the night's racing purse that the club guarantees.

"The speedway feels it needs this money to help pay for the new grandstand facilities (a steel grandstand, washrooms and concessions costing $250,000 to $300,000).

"If this is so and they cannot afford any added expenses over last year, why have they given track promoter Tony Mortel a raise over last season?" VITRA asked in its statement.

Mortel slaid Monday night he was given a cost-of-living increase, raising his salary to $11,000 this year from $10,000. He added that last year VITRA stock car shows cost the track $10,000 and the directors did not feel they were in a position to absorb another loss like that while paying interest on the loan needed to pay for the new grandstand.

Vantreight said he had personally guaranteed $250,000 of the investment.

"We told them we would take the back gate money and pay all the costs, including the insurance, and if at the end of the year the VITRA shows produced enough revenue to cover all costs we would refund the back-gate receipts," Mortel said.

"In effect, we are offering them $300 a night more than they got last year.

"When I took over management of the speedway three years ago we were $50,000 to $60,000 in the hole and were faced with a grandstand that was going to be condemned. I have a responsibility to the shareholders and I intend to keep racing operating."

Mortel said he plans 35 racing dates this year including stock car shows — with or without VITRA.

Wade was not certain how much revenue was generated at the back gate last year, but one official estimated it was about $4,000. The back gate produced a $2,700 point fund as well as paying insurance and making up the purse differences when front-gate revenues failed to produce the $1,800 guarantee.

The front gate money — admissions paid by the public — was split on a sliding scale between the track and VITRA with the association getting between 40 and 50 per cent, depending on how much money was taken in. A similar arrangement would be in effect this year.

Wade, along with directors Bill Smith, Boyd Porteous and Bill Price, felt the issue was one of control rather than money.

Wade said VITRA has not yet decided what it would do if its drivers competed at Western without a contract. But Price said lack of a contract would not stop open-competition cars from Victoria and elsewhere competing at Western.

A Look at Golf Styles And Yearly Financing

The 1979 Victoria District Golf Committee hasn't changed but more careful scrutiny of the clothes golfers wear and formation of a committee to set up an operating budget for the season were the new things to pop up at the annual general meeting Monday.

Bob Bell of Uplands, returned as committee chairman, brought up the matter of proper attire for provincial and district tournaments.

Most district clubs have dress codes, he noted, and the District Committee can be placed in an embarassing position by allowing improperly-dressed golfers to tee off in a district-sanctioned tournament.

Certain attire may have to be banned and disciplinary action may include rejection of the entry of any offending player.

"It isn't asking too much to try and get players to wear a nice pair of slacks and a golf shirt," said Bell.

The District Committee, which has shown operating profits in 20 of the past 23 years, has never budgeted for the season in advance. The motion, by Cedar Hill's Fred Worthington, was well received and a committee was appointed to set out a budget for the year.

Despite operating all district tournaments and an excellent junior program, the Committee came through with a profit of $1,872 last year.

Bell warned the committee that entry fees for some tournaments may have to be raised. Member clubs received only $3 or $4 from each entry, and the returns are almost certain to be increased because of escalating costs. It is one of the problems to be studied by the budget committee.

In addition to Bell, vice-chairman Bill Halbert of Royal Colwood, treasurer Bob Peters, also of Colwood, and secretary Leo Derman all were returned to their posts.

Halbert also took over chairmanship of the junior committee, Worthington was returned as chairman of the Inter-Club League competition for the Willie Park Driver and Derek Rhys-Jones stays on as buttons chairman.

Blalock Wins In a Breeze

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Jane Blalock, playing the wind-blown Pasadena Golf Club course as if she owned it, shot a 70 Monday for a tournament-record 205 total that gave her a six-stroke victory in the $75,000 Ladies' Professional Golf Association Orange Blossom tournament.

Blalock's 11-under-par total helped her become only the second player to win the tournament two straight years in its 26-year history. Kathy Whitworth won the event in 1968, '69 and '70.

Her score bested Amy Alcott's nine-under-par total in 1975 on the 6,109-yard, par-72 Pasadena Golf Club course. Blalock picked up the first prize of $11,250.

Blalock, beginning the day-late final round with a three-stroke lead, birdied three of the first five holes and had the event wrapped up after second-place Silvia Bertolaccini double-bogeyed the 10th hole. Bertolaccini finished in a tie for fifth.

Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., shot a 70 to finish second at 211, earning $7,500. JoAnne Carner shot a final-round 68 for a total of 213 that tied her with Pat Bradley for third and the $5,400 third prize.

Cup-holders Ipswich Town shattered Bristol Rovers 6-1 and a hat-trick by striker Alan Young gave Oldham Athletic a 3-1 win over Leicester City in a fourth round tie. Leeds United, losing 3-1 with eight minutes to go, fought back to draw 3-3 with West Bromwich Albion with goals from Arthur Graham and Carl Harris.

DEFEATS WENDY BARLOW AFTER ROUSING OVATION

Chris Enjoys Return to Dallas

WENDY BARLOW
. . . wonderful experience

Evert was given a rousing ovation upon her first appearance in a $200,000 women's tennis tournament Monday night in Moody Coliseum on the Southern Methodist University campus. She responded by defeating 18-year-old Wendy Barlow of Victoria 6-2, 6-1.

"I really didn't know what to expect," the second-seeded Evert said. "I was crushed back then (when the fans booed her every turn in a match she won over Australian Leslie Hunt). I had never had that done to me before."

Evert said she had not returned to Dallas since then because "Dallas came at a time when I wanted to rest — no other reason."

She denied carrying a grudge against the city.

"I just wish that all could be wiped out," she added.

In mastering Barlow, a Brigham Young University student who said "it was a wonderful experience," Evert admitted she experimented early in the match.

"Wendy is a good baseline player," said Evert, who now goes against veteran Rosie Casals in tonight's second round. "I couldn't get any winners against her early."

"I also was feeling out the court. You know, moving as we do, we play on a fast court one tournament, a slow one next. I'm just getting my feel."

She capitalized on her younger opponent's inexperience. Once in the first set, Barlow hoisted a return to the coliseum roof, and she double faulted to close out the match.

First-round casualties Monday night included sixth-seeded Kerry Reid, who lost to Linda Siegel 6-2, 6-4; ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan, a 6-4, 7-5 loser to Lea Antonopolis.

Opening lead — five of clubs.

Notrump play often features a race for the establishment of tricks, but the order in which these tricks are established is often the decisive element.

Consider this deal where West led a club. Declarer took the club in dummy with the seven, East discarding a low heart, and continued with a low club to his king, won by West with the ace as East discarded a low spade. West then shifted to a low diamond and South had to go down one.

Declarer would have made the contract had he led a low heart from dummy at trick two instead of a low club. Although it was tempting to establish dummy's clubs at once South should have realized that it was extremely dangerous to put West on lead and subject himself to a diamond shift at trick three.

The club continuation at trick two was distinctly shortsighted because it led to only eight tricks and left a ninth trick still to be fought for — most probably in hearts.

It would have been wiser to tackle hearts before clubs because, on the bidding, it was virtualy certain that East had the A-K of hearts and the contract could not be defeated in that case.

South might also have approached the matter from a slightly different angle — that the contract was safe if West could be kept out of the lead early in the play. South should therefore not have invited disaster by leading a club at trick two because this play would almost surely sink the contract if West found the obvious shift to a diamond at trick three.

The principle that applies here is that it is occasionally more important to quickly establish one trick than it is to establish three tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, February 28
By SYDNEY OMARR

TAURUS (Apr. 20 - May 20): Restrictions actually are "blessings in disguise." Know it, be patient. If you accept delay as opportunity for second wind, you will be on winning track. The choice is your own. Aquarius, Scorpio figure prominently. Give yourself a chance to "heal."

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Emphasis on desire, creative decisions, profits from business transaction. Friendship is intensified. Wishes, romance, fulfillment could be part of exciting scenario. Another Gemini, a Virgo and Sagittarian play feature roles.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Accent on career, civic duties, honor, reputation, ability to "take charge" during crisis. You can gain cooperation of family. Money, special project are involved. Be diplomatic — realize that you have supporters who have not yet shown their hands.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Spotlight on travel, spiritual insights, being quiet within. You gain knowledge about — you. Lines of communication are sharply-defined. See places and people in realistic light. Pisces, Virgo figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Accent on discovery, flashing insights, locating missing legal documents. Older individual shares benefit of experience. Organize, get files in order. Exercise discipline in lining up priorities. Yes, Capricorn is very much involed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Finish rather than begin — defer to wishes of partner, mate. Don't force issues — or views. You do best now by listening rather than asserting. Aries is in picture — so is another Libran. Legal nuances color actions. You'll see!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): New approach to work is featured — interest is renewed, vigor returns, dependents and pets are more pleasant. Avoid heavy lifting — your back could be vulnerable. You get added recognition due to an "unusual event."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Charisma, creativity are featured. Imprint style, make changes, take a chance on your own capabilities. Children, speculation command spotlight. If "quiet within," sense of direction will return. Family situation will get better, not worse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Obtain hint frm Sagittarius message. Be versatile, but avoid scattering your efforts. One who is of conservative bent does have your best interest at heart. However, it is wise now to heed your own counsel. Legal decision might be reversed — in your favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You are relieved to learn that financial picture is not as bleak as initially indicated. Relative, short trip, and message play major role in scenario. Be aware of fine points, details, subtle nuances. Read between the lines. You will learn something of value.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Define terms; refuse to give up something of value for "whispered promise." Accent on personal possessions, locating lost articles and protecting investment. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in your personal scenario.

IF FEBRUARY 28th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, temperamental, attractive to opposite sex and somewhat arrogant. You are sensitive, prescient, and have courage enough to fight when you feel cause is right. You are stubborn, determined and have knack for getting to heart of matters. You arouse envy, you are volatile and when you walk into a room your presence is immediately felt by others. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1979, a year which sees you establishing yourself on more solid ground. Seed that was planted last year will bear fruit — in March you communicate, travel, make vital changes and you could fall madly in love.

Tax Tips '78

Tax Tips are prepared for the Victoria Times by Revenue Canada. Detailed tax information can be obtained from the local Revenue Canada office, 1415 Vancouver St. by phoning 386-2176 between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Q. My wife has no taxable income and she is eligible for the Age Exemption and the Interest Dividend and Capital Gains Deduction. Which one of us must complete Schedule 9 to claim "eligible deductions transferred from spouse"?

A. You will be claiming the eligible deductions on behalf of your wife so you must complete Schedule 9. Remember to attach Schedule 9 and your wife's information slips (T5, T600, etc.,) to your income tax return.

Q. I realize that you are only entitled to contribute to one Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan in your lifetime. However, can you transfer funds tax-free from one RHOSP to another?

A. Yes. You may apply for a second plan which will be eligible for registration provided that: all amounts in your first plan have been paid or transferred on your behalf directly to your new plan; your new plan, at the time of payment or transfer, meets the necessary requirements. See Guide Item 23 of your 1978 Tax Guide; You and the trust company established under your new plan are resident in Canada at the time of the payment or transfer.

The funds transferred in this way from your present RHOSP into a new plan are not considered income to you at the time of transfer, and the amount transferred does not qualify as a deduction in computing your income.

Q. I have $300 bank interest, $400 in grossed-up dividends and $500 taxable capital gains from the sale of some of my Canadian securities. Will I have to pay tax on this income?

A. Your particular investment income and your capital gains from the sale of Canadian stocks or securities are eligible for the "Interest, dividends and capital gains deduction" of up to $1,000. In your case you will only have to pay tax on the remaining $200. For more details see Item 39 in your 1978 Tax Guide.

Q. What investment income qualifies for "interest, dividends and capital gains deduction"?

A. Most interest income from Canadian sources, dividends from taxable Canadian corporations and taxable capital gains realized on the sale of Canadian securities qualify for the deduction. The deduction is equal to either the total amount of the investment income listed above or $1,000, whichever is less. For more information see Item 39 in your 1978 Tax Guide.

Q. I earned $9,500 last year. What amount can I claim as my 'employment expense deduction'?

A. Your employment expense deduction is equal to 3 per cent of your wage and salary income up to a maximum of $250. In your case you can claim the full $250.

Q. How long can you contribute funds to a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. There is a twenty-year limit imposed on accumulating savings into a RHOSP, dating from the year the plan began. This applies to all plans, including those already in existence.

Q. I am a widower with two dependent children, Carol 16 and Ned 10. I understand that I can claim the equivalent-to-married exemption for one of my children. Which one should I claim it for?

A. The claim for a dependent child 16 and older is greater than the claim for a child under 16. Therefore it is usually more advantageous to claim the equivalent-to-married exemption for the younger child. This would allow you a greater total deduction. Your claim, however, will be affected by your children's net income. For more information ask your District Taxation Office for the pamphlet "Income Tax and The Single Parent".

Before The Judge

A 28-year-old man was charged in provincial court Monday with two counts of causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure and one of breaking and entering.

Robert Harold Brumitt, 610 Dunedin, was charged with intent to wound 20-year-old James Ernest Ponton and 18-year-old Jamie Lampard Douglas, and breaking into a residence at 2537 Government on Sunday.

The charges arose from the arrest of two men and a woman early Sunday following an incident which resulted in two men being sent to hospital.

Judge William Ostler agreed to an adjournment until Wednesday for possible bail hearing and election of trial method requested by defence lawyer Darrel Woods.

After being denied bail, 28-year-old Allan Reginald Scott, 1029 Esquimalt, was remanded until Wednesday to fix a trial date on a charge of possession of a stolen, $188 Employment Canada cheque.

Defence lawyer Patrick Sweeney entered a not guilty plea on Scott's behalf.

Judge Blake Allan gave a 17-year-old Central Saanich youth a suspended sentence and community service work for two break-ins and possession of a stolen bicycle.

Leroy Raymond Jones, also known as Leroy Raymond Jack, 2749 Beach Road, pleaded guilty to the three counts Jan. 26 and was remanded until Monday for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

The break-ins occurred Aug. 5 at Robert Lang and Co. Ltd., 155 Langford, and CN Express, 80 Esquimalt.

Jones was caught with the stolen bike 10 days later.

Allan placed the young man on six months' probation and ordered him to perform 100 hours of community service work.

A 21-year-old North Saanich man facing his second trial on a charge of driving while impaired by marijuana had his case dismissed by Judge Gilbert Hogg after Crown counsel Nicholas Lang elected not to lead any evidence.

Ian David Brenton, 9125 East Saanich, was convicted April 6 by Judge Allan and fined $450.

Defence lawyer William McElmoyle appealed the decision and Judge T.G. Darling in county court ruled Nov. 3 that Allan erred in law but, because there was some evidence at the trial, ordered a new trial.

Judge Fred Green ordered a pre-sentence report for a 19-year-old Fairfield man who pleaded guilty to a Feb. 7 break-in at Douglas Pharmacy, 1469 Douglas.

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming re-elected trial by magistrate for James Graham Bryce, 132 Moss, before a scheduled preliminary hearing Monday and entered a guilty plea to one of two charges of breaking and entering.

Bryce will be sentenced March 27.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Jennie Sargison, 60, of 2515 Estevan, $400; Wynn Merrick Stoney, 41, of 3186 Metchosin, $400; and Russell Ian Campbell, 20, of 200 Dallas, $300.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Psychiatrist Joins Clinic

Parents, though well-meaning, are often unable to help their youngsters through turbulent teenage years, says Dr. Saul Levine, 40, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Toronto, co-ordinator of adolescent psychiatric services at the Hospital for Sick Children and beginning today, a contributor to the Times Youth Clinic column.

"Some parents may be too involved in their own lives to listen to their children's problems. Teenagers in these families feel totally alone in the world," he says.

"But even parents who do what they can to provide their children with solid foundations — love, trust, respect — cannot help their youngsters predict the future. Kids today grow up in a very challenging world."

The Montreal-born physician moved to Toronto in 1969 following four years of psychiatry training at Stanford University in California.

His studies read like a chronicle of struggles waged by young people attempting to deal with their times: Speed-freaks who sought escape with hallucinogenic drugs during the late sixties, to family-seeking commune-dwellers, to religious cult-followers of recent years.

But there's nothing casual about the manner in which he explodes common myths about adolescence.

"The teen years are not merely a phase that kids pass through," he says. "Adolescence is smooth for some and distressingly turbulent for others."

Furthermore, he says, it's "an economic fact" that the '70s are "a different ball game" with unemployment a harsh new factor making teenagers feel their lives, with whatever present problems, may be hopeless for the future as well.

Rising youth unemployment in Canada is now at its highest of the '70s, at 14.5 per cent, causing social unrest that could lead to youthful anarchy, he said.

While teenage use of amphetamines is less than in the '60s, Levine says, alcohol abuse and suicide rates for the young are rising.

As for marijuana, "it's a fact of life for the young," he says. "We better face it — any high school student can get it. And it's not necessarily a danger . . . unless a kid already has problems.'

When a young person has other problems, marijuana, like alcohol, can become a self-destructive crutch, he warns.

Why are adolescents so easily troubled? Levine answers first with medical fact: Their bodies are undergoing "change within change" as emotions race to keep up with physical growth.

For young teens, he says, many of their concerns are timeless. They're the same worries generations of their age group have suffered, too.

"They worry if their boy friend likes them, about acne, about the size of their genitalia, about mood swings."

Older teens, he says, still face some of their earlier fears, plus added anxieties about their future.

"They worry about where their lives are going. They fear failure at the very time they have to make lifetime choices. It's very scary for them at times."

What young people are talking about when they express such concerns, is fear of rejection and low self-esteem, says Levine, who also has a private psychiatric practice for teens.

Preparing to join the Times' twice-weekly column of question and anwers from teen readers — Levine says he noted "so may desperate letters" from teenagers with low feelings of self-worth.

He says the dividing line between unhappy youth and more severely disturbed teenagers differs with each person's individual tolerance.

"It depends on how much they can take and to what extent their moods interfere with school, social life and family relationships," says the father of three.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I am 17 and homosexual. My parents found out by reading my diary. My dad laughed and said every guy thinks he's gay during adolescence, but since then the subject has been taboo.

Two years ago I met this straight guy who I developed a deep affection for. I told him that I was, or thought I was, homosexual. He said that it didn't bother him and that we could still be friends. I tried acting cool but I eventually got the hots for him, and towards the end of school that year he started making it clear I wasn't welcome anymore.

Before I met him I had a girlfriend but since I'm not physically attracted to girls, I broke up with her, gave her some stupid excuse about wanting to go out with someone else.

I still get very lonely for my male friend. I've considered suicide but I'm really not the type and besides that, homosexuals go to hell so I haven't got much to look forward to.

I can't talk to my parents because they were going to disown my sister just for living with a guy.

ANSWER: Yours is a problem I've certainly heard before. You seem convinced that you are a homosexual, and your fantasies, feelings and history confirm this impression. Yet you are also convinced that homosexuals "go to hell." I guess I'd support that myth if it prevented you from committing suicide, but you do say you are not the type to do that.

I don't want to pretend that yours isn't a major problem. Our society (and most others, for that matter) makes it extremely difficult for gay people, either via prejudicial laws or more likely by ignorance and narrow-minded bias of many citizens. Homosexuals are no more (nor less) sinful, disturbed, sick, bad, dangerous, etc., than heterosexuals.

I agree that it is most important that you get a chance to speak to somebody, be it a friend or a professional. If your community does not have a homosexual counselling centre (they go under names like Community Homophile Association, Matachine Society, Gay Rights Association, Young Homosexuals of —, etc.) then try speaking to a liberated minister, doctor or psychotherapist.

You're not crazy! But a chance to express your feelings about your conflicts, your unreciprocated love, your parents' lack of understanding, to someone who has been there before, either personally or professionally would help you.

You are in good company. There are many other young men and women facing the same issues. Read Laura Hobson's Consenting Adult (paperback) for a story like yours. And make sure your parents read it too — it's written by one of them.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am 16 years old and in Grade 10. My marks last year were not so hot and my parents are making me stay in the house every night of the week (except Fridays and Saturdays) to give me the chance to study.

Another reason for this is that my mother is afraid of me becoming pregnant since I told her that I'd had intercourse with my boyfriend.

I told her that I only did it once to see what it was like. I know that's the dumbest reason in the books, but I have to be truthful.

I've been thinking of leaving home because I'm afraid that my parents and I are going to become bitter enemies, and I don't want that to happen.

ANSWER: It is unfortunate if your parents' attitude toward you has changed because you were truthful with your mother about having had intercourse once.

I am sure it was a shock to her to hear that and she may need a bit of time to adjust. As a parent she would naturally be concerned that you might become pregnant.

You may feel she has nothing to fear, but it could take a bit of time for her to regain her confidence in you. The best way to assist that is to continue to be honest with her about the things you do and not to cause too much upset about the rules that they have put down.

Sometimes you may feel it's a burden but I can assure you that trying to make things better at home will help you a lot more than leaving home and trying to cope with all the problems that would create.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I just started high school this year and I've recently heard kids talking about mono. Could you explain how you get it and what are the consequences?

ANSWER: Mono is the short name for infectious mononucleosis, sometimes called glandular fever. It is an acute disease caused by a virus and occurs most commonly in young people from 15 to 25 years of age. It is spread orally and is sometimes referred to as the kissing disease — which may be the reason it is found most commonly in young people.

The acute disease lasts from one to several weeks an the symptoms include fever, sore throat and enlarged glands. It appears to be associated with a fairly long convalescence during which the person complains of fatigue and lack of energy.

It is usually a mild disease, with complete recovery within weeks. One attack gives resistance to further attacks so mono is usually a one-occurrence illness in a person's life.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I'm a 13-year-old girl with a sister of 18 who needs help. She lies a lot. Please tell me anything to help her.

ANSWER: There is very little of an active nature you can do to help your sister. All you can do is love her, which you do already.

You should not enter in her world of deceit by letting her get away with lies about you or other people.

She must come to the stage where she wants help herself and asks for it. Then she herself can write to us or go to a counsellor.

Killing Pain 'Naturally'

HALIFAX (CP) — A natural pain suppressant secreted by the human body can explain both why acupuncture is successful and why drug withdrawal symptoms are so painful, says the senior research officer with the National Research Council of Canada.

"It is thought, and there is some good evidence, that each of us has in his pituitary gland a source of the compound that suppresses pain continuously.

"We all have it. This sets the stage. The compound has been isolated and called enkephalin, a name coined about three years ago.

"Production of enkephalin could be the biochemical basis for the mechanism of acupuncture. If you are getting an acupuncture needle in the right nerve to the pituitary, it should turn on the enkephalin switch," Smith says.

Experiments have been done to measure the increased levels of the pain-killing compound under acupuncture. The drug methadone can inhibit its effect. Acupuncture does not work on an animal whose pituitary gland has been removed.

There is also a relationship between drug addiction and enkephalin, Smith says. It is believed, but not proved, that drug addiction shuts down one's enkephalin "factory."

"Morphine or heroin acts at a higher level than enkephalin," says Smith. "The drug takes over and so the factory in the pituitary gland shuts down."

Models Like Work But It's No Joyride

EDMONTON (CP) — Being a fashion model is not the glamorous profession it's made out to be.

"It's a lot of work," says Wendy Welychko, who's been in the business for more than a year.

Wendy is considered a high-fashion model because of her striking face with high cheekbones and her tall, slim body, which lends itself to modelling sophisticated styles.

"I don't have a lot of free time. Most of it is spent keeping my clothes in order an in repair, keeping my makeup together in case I get called to do a job in half an hour."

The 27-year-old model says her profession makes for a short-lived career.

"Most of the jobs that are really happening go to younger girls. You can model until you're 35 but it would be in a different vein. When you get around to that age, you do whatever's left."

But the job requires a lot of training, Wendy says.

"You need to know how to walk and talk properly, how to communicate with the photographer and how to apply makeup."

Self-confidence is as important as a striking appearance, and every model must learn the tricks of the trade.

They must carry extra shoes, pantyhose, masking tape for invisible patching, scarves to put over their heads when modelling clothes and lots of makeup.

"It's an expensive job," Wendy says. "You have to keep up with the styles. You can't walk around in blue jeans and expect to be believed as a model. You have to look the part."

Most people, she says, believe that models walk around with mink coats and all the clothes they want.

"But they don't just give you the clothes, say 'Well, thank you for modelling,' and pay you as well.

"You spend a lot of time in stores looking at what's new and you spend a lot of time reading magazines and trying to keep ahead."

The modelling life is a little easier for Marty Mackay, 35, who has been a part-time fashion model for five years, but who can also fall back on his partnership in a prospering optical business.

Mackay, who is married and has two children, spends two or three hours a week modelling. He says he is in the business because "you meet a lot of interesting people, and I think there's always the glamor aspect to it.

"It's not really that hard for a man. I think it's much more involved for a woman, with makeup and clothing."

He regards modelling as a lark, but admits that "it's not all fun, fun, fun."

There are more than 500 fashion models in Edmonton, but spokesmen for the city's three modelling agencies — Peggi Adams, Covergirl and Vogue — says fewer than five work full-time.

The average pay is $30 an hour, but most models don't get enough assignments to make a living at it.

Male models usually are partners in businesses, own their own firms or work in fields which enable them to take time off. Women models may work part-time as receptionists, coat-check attendants or cocktail waitresses, or else make arrangements for time off before they accept a job.

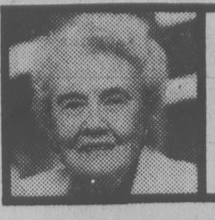
Even Bits of Soap Welcome



elizabeth forbes

Did you know that collecting soap is an expanding United Services Committee of Canada project?

That information is included in Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova's annual review.

In it, the USC executive director tells us soap is desperately needed in Africa and Asia by the lowest income groups who often cannot even afford one balanced meal a day for their families.

And because of this need, many USC volunteers in Canada are gathering the small tablets of soap which travellers leave behind in hotels and motels, when they check out.

These clean, valuable little things, as Dr. Lotta describes them, are carefully packed in cellophane bags and added to practically every box of clothing before it leaves USC centres for overseas.

In the review she speaks in jubilant mood of the success of her 1978 fund drive.

"We considerably exceeded our goal of $3,800,000 in funds and gifts-in-kind," she writes, "and our total, the highest ever, stands at $3,911,000." (It is likely more than that by now.)

She also says with justifiable pride that an abiding principle of the USC is to keep administrative costs to a minimum and that overhead in the past year was a mere nine per cent.

What are the reasons for this great success during the difficult times that are besetting Canada?

Dr. Lotta says it is the assurance among new and old donors that the USC is totally non-denominational, non-political and non-racial — and that, because of its 33 years of experience in the field, it knows how to stretch every nickel and dime wisely and lovingly.

Also that the USC is a completely Canadian agency. Its funds come from Canadian contributors, with a very small percentage from Canadians living overseas.

Paid staff is employed only in Ottawa while in 41 communities from coast to coast "golden volunteers are in complete charge, without ever expecting a cent in return for their labors."

A combination of all these factors and possibly other more intangible reasons are responsible, she believes, for the USC's impressive 1978 success.

Right now Dr. Lotta is on her annual overseas tour in which she will visit every single one or the 98 current projects of the USC.

She will also consult with indigenous representatives and partner agencies overseas, whom she tells us in her review are carefully chosen and completely trusted.

As far as priorities are concerned, they have never changed, the review reminds us.

The USC is immensely practical and always does first things first by aiding children, the greatest victims of all; the very old, the ill and the handicapped.

"To us mankind's greatest enemy is hunger," Dr. Lotta writes, "and so we do our best to provide and help grow more and better food."

The USC ships blankets, baby things and as much clothing as possible to those in the cold countries.

Health services, education and training, family planning and community development follow, wherever possible.

"We train people to stand on their own feet and there is no happier day than when our assistance is no longer necessary."

To substantiate that last statement the executive director speaks of Korea where the USC began operations in 1952.

On December 31, the USC was phased out of Korea, leaving the many projects it has launched during the past quarter-century maintained with Korean funds and in charge of a Korean director it had trained.

At that time, on behalf of the president, Dr. Hitschmanova was presented with the country's highest decoration for civil merit, to pay tribute to all the help given in the past 26 years.

The review ends with assurance that USC is a builder in its own quiet way and its ingredients are an all-embracing love for the little ones, the ill and the very old.

Nowhere does it overstay its usefulness. As quietly as it comes, it says goodbye and moves on to face new challenges and responsibilities.

Dr. Lotta also makes it clear that the USC would not exist today without the Friendship Dollars and the trust, endorsement and partnership of its thousands of Canadian friends.

She writes that when she founded the USC after the end of the Second World War, she beieved that aid would be needed for two or three years and then its task would be over.

"Today I realize how naive I was. After more than three decades of ever growing suffering and constantly increasing calls for more and more help from voluntary agencies such as ours, the need for continuing non-government, non-political assistance at grass roots level is becoming increasingly clear.

"The USC fervently believes that aid must come from the heart and be given from friend to friend without strings, for assistance must never degrade nor create new problems."

Footnote — If you would like to join the thousands in Canada who are helping Dr. Hitschmanova with their Friendship Dollars and in many other ways, get in touch with her through the USC of Canada, 56 Sparks Street, Ottawa, Ont., K1P 5B1.

Looking for a good used car with low mileage isn't always good shopping logic. A car driven more than the average number of miles per year could have belonged to a travelling salesman. All that on-highway mileage means less use of brakes, transmission, steering column, plus the fact that the battery was kept recharged. Low mileage can indicate city driving, which is hard wear for an auto's mechanical parts.

A tall secretary said she couldn't afford a couple of good wool blazers, so she browsed in a couple of used clothing thrift shops and found two handsome, tweedy men's sports jackets for under $10 each. No one noticed how the jackets buttoned. (Men's used clothing will often sell for less than women's garments because women's items sell faster.)

Having an antique mirror resilvered is expensive and decreases its value as an antique. If the spots bother you, an antique dealer suggests pressing tin foil on the back of the spots.

If value isn't important, strip off the old mirror's silver and have a thin new mirror cut exactly the same size. Put the old mirror into the frame, back it with the new one, and you have the effect of an old mirror.

Any loose-fitting dress that never leaves your closet — because you're tired of it or it's too short — can easily be made into a useful skirt. Cut off the top of the dress just below the neck opening or bustline darts. Turn down and stitch a top hem deep enough to hold a length of elastic smaller than your waist measurement. If the turn down would make the skirt too short, stitch on wide bias tape for the elastic's channel.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: How does a decent, naturally passionate, deeply religious widow overcome her desire to be loved by a man?

After having been married 38 years to the only man in my life, widowed a year, not exactly ancient (61), I live with memories constantly revived by TV, movies, literature, all ending with sexual fulfillment that stirs up desires difficult to suppress.

Having once had pure gold, I couldn't settle for brass. No man could ever replace the one I lost.

I feel ashamed and unclean, and am miserable beyond words. Is there a solution?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: You have no reason to feel "ashamed" or "unclean" because your natural desire to be loved remains undiminished at 61.

Instead of trying to suppress your desires, look for someone who's in the same boat, someone to whom you can give love. And don't be so quick to evaluate "metal." You need an ALLY — not an ALLOY.

DEAR ABBY: My wife keeps a picture of her mother in our bedroom and I have to look at it more than I care to. In case you suspect that I am not too fond of my wife's mother, you are correct.

My wife has plenty of other places to display her mother's picture, but she insists on keeping it in the bedroom.

At first I hinted, then I moved it, but my wife always puts it back on my dresser. (It's not even nicely framed.)

Should I throw IT, my wife, or myself out?

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANON: Quit playing games. Tell your wife that if she doesn't find another permanent spot for her mother's picture, you will!

DEAR ABBY: I'm desperately in need of some suggestions. Having my father around the house lately is creating a bigger problem than my six-month-old daughter.

He recently had prostate surgery and "dribbles" constantly. Then he sits on my velvet-covered chairs with damp trousers.

I spoke to his urologist. He said it wasn't uncommon for a man to dribble that way following that type of surgery, but he didn't tell me what to do about it.

I don't think dad realizes what a mess he's making of my chairs. I wouldn't hurt his feelings for the world. He is a doll.

What can you suggest? I just can't ask my father to wear a diaper!

DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Call your father's urologist and tell him what you've told me. Surely he'll have a solution for this problem. In the meantime, protect your chairs with a temporary covering.

The Surgeon Who as a Boy Couldn't Read

TORONTO (CP) — An Arizona professor astonished 700 people at a conference on learning disabilities when she described the case of a boy who was unable to read past the grade 4 level.

The boy learned to accept his lot in life and did the best he could — he now is a succesful surgeon in a large hospital in the United States.

Jeanne McCarthy, professor of special education at the University of Arizona, said that if children with problems automatically are considered in a certain category, they may suffer in later life.

The boy she described could have been classed with other children suffering reading handicaps, but his other abilities were taken into consideration by a perceptive counsellor, she said at the conference at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education.

The boy had a sharp memory and was able to retain most information read to him. By working with a good tutor, he was able to finish medical school and become a surgeon.

The professor criticized what she called territorial wars among experts in various experts in her field and said children can be helped better if specialists share information.

"As we play around with definitions, we have to decide whether we're clarifying the situation or just muddying up the pond."

She said she is distressed by a trend in child-care textbooks telling students to use the same treatment for a child suffering from a learning disability, an emotional disturbance or mental retardation.

A different approach is needed for each problem but all aspects of the child should be examined to ensure that no side of the child is neglected, she said in her address opening the three-day conference.

The conference is sponsored by the institute, the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities and the provincial ministries of education and social services.

J.E.T. stands for Job Experience Training. This program of the Canadian Employment and Immigration Commission helps unemployed young people to take the first step towards becoming permanent members of the labor force.

The authors of the six-page pamphlet What Is J.E.T.? realize that many people have difficulty finding a job because of lack of experience. Therefore, J.E.T. will provide up to 26 weeks of practical work experience for new entrants into the labor force who are between 15 and 24 years of age.

Potential J.E.T. workers will be interviewed by a local Canada Manpower Centre and referred to a likely employer who makes the final decision.

Under the J.E.T. program, employers will be reimbursed for 50 per cent of the J.E.T. client's wages or $1.50 per hour, whichever is less, for a maximum of $1,560.

In addition, J.E.T. provides pre-employment orientation for each client. This includes such topics as positive work attitudes, employer expectations and how to keep a job.

The pamphlet can be obtained from your local Canada Manpower Centre or by writing to: Enquiries and Distribution, Public Affairs Division, Employment and Immigration Canada, Room 520a, 350 Rideau Street, Ottawa, Ont. K1A 0J9.

Teflon Shots Help Some 'Sick' Voices

By L. L. Coleman, MD

About 10 years ago, I suddenly became hoarse. The doctors found I had paralysis of one vocal cord. They told me that my hoarseness would never disappear and that nothing could be done about it. Only recently, I read something about a special injection that could make the vocal cord move again. Can you help me track down the doctor who does this? — Mr. C. E.

Dear Mr. E.:

Paralysis of the vocal cord sometimes follows complex surgery on the thyroid or parathyroid glands. In some instances, pressure on a special nerve because of enlargement of one of the chambers of the heart may also cause laryngeal paralysis. In a number of instances, this phenomenon also occurs without any apparent reason. A virus infection is sometimes suspected.

When the so-called 'recurrent laryngeal nerve' is injured, one vocal cord may not adequately move towards the midline. The result is that there is air space which produces the hoarseness you refer to.

It is now possible, in some instances, to inject Teflon into the paralyzed vocal cord. This produces a swelling and reduces the air space. Very often there is remarkable improvement in the timbre and quality of the speaking voice with one or two injections. It does not, however, reactivate the nerve nor does it make the vocal cord muscle move again.

In your local community, there are many excellent ear, nose and throat surgeons who are familiar with this procedure and who can perform it safely and competently.

I have been breast-feeding my baby for four months. Recently, he developed colic. My doctor suggested I stop drinking cow's milk because this might be the cause of the baby's colic. How can I breastfeed him if I don't drink milk? — Mrs. R. R. D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

Your doctor has made a wise contribution to your baby's heath. It has been found that there is a special substance in cow's milk which, when drunk by the nursing mother, can produce colic in some highly sensitive infants.

In fact, it has been found that when cow's milk was eliminated from the mother's diet, breast-fed colicky infants returned to normal health within a few days.

The idea that infant colic may be related to some intolerance to cow's milk is not new. That which is new is the knowledge that, even when only the mother drinks cow's milk, colic can be transmitted to the infant through breastfeeding.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . Before visiting a doctor for the first time, write out a simple, concise history of past illnesses and present complaints. It saves patient and doctor a great deal of time.

Sunday Draw Tends To Prove Prof Right

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — David Bellhouse said he was pleasantly surprised about the way his theory worked in Sunday night's Provincial lottery draw.

Sunday night, four out of five tickets redeemable for $10,000 prizes fit his theory.

Despite the results, Bellhouse, an assistant professor of statistics, said there is not enough data to prove his theory that a ticket with a zero, one or two in the second place of a seven-digit ticket or in the third place of an eight-digit ticket improves the chances of winning $10,000.

The $10,000 prize is determined from the last six digits in the winning $1-million tickets in each draw.

Bellhouse said five machines are used to determine the winning ticket. The first machine has balls with two- and three-digit numbers in it, and this is where the odds are affected.

In the November draw, for example, the first machine had balls in it numbered 10 to 104. Because of this, numbers zero to four could be chosen from 10 different balls, while five to nine appeared on only nine balls.

Bellhouse said he told the Ontario Lottery Corp. about the problem three weeks ago, but he still is waiting for a reply to the letter.

Barbara Jesson, lottery manager, said this week the corporation has known about the bias for the $10,000 prizes since the draws started.

Protester Finds Another Ally

OTTAWA (CP) — A woman who has been demonstrating on Parliament Hill through all weather for four months should have a chance to tell her story to the Commons justice committee, Conservative justice critic Eldon Woolliams said Monday.

He told the Commons that Lucille Dube's persistence — and her three hunger strikes — have earned her the right to have her grievance investigated. The registered nurse from neighboring Hull, Que., has vowed to die on Parliament Hill if Prime Minister Trudeau does not help her in a fight against five Quebec judges who she says are corrupt.

Justice Minister Marc Lalonde said he had spoken to the woman and had investigated her allegations. He concluded there was nothing the government could do to help her.

He did not agree that the justice committee should investigate, but said Woolliams was free to try to convince the committee to hear Ms. Dube.

Woolliams and Social Credit MP Adrien Lambert, from Bellechasse, Que., were the latest in a list of MPs to take up Ms. Dube's case in the Commons.

They have met with no success, as Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons two weeks ago that she was "a litigant who has lost in front of the courts and who is not prepared to take that loss." He made it clear she is wasting her time.

Ms. Dube said Trudeau is the only one who can help her.

Restored Tax On Storms Heats Debate In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has cancelled an energy-conservation tax break for storm windows and doors. Concrete and double-glazing have now been given equal treatment — a five-per-cent sales tax.

"Glass is less efficient in energy conservation than solid-wall construction," Alan Martin (L—Scarborough West), Finance Minister Jean Chretien's parliamentary secretary, said Monday night in the Commons.

"Does the finance minister want us to live in buildings without windows and doors?" asked Progressive Conservative Jack Hare (St. Boniface).

Hare described the tax change, which dates from Finance Minister Jean Chretien's Nov. 16 budget, as a feat of mind-boggling logic. He raised the issue during a late-night grievance debate.

Martin said the tax break was intended to encourage installation of double-glazed windows and doors on existing buildings. But it had proven impossible to make a taxing distinction in cases of new building construction.

Treu's Win Confirmed; Ottawa Won't Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — Alexander Peter Treu, the electronics engineer who handled NATO air defence work, feels he has been vindicated by Ottawa's decision not to appeal a court ruling that overturned his conviction for violating the Official Secrets Act.

"I think the Canadian government has had enough of Peter Treu," he said Monday, adding the justice department would have been "stupid" to appeal the unanimous Feb. 20 ruling by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

"The judgment of the appeals court has cleared me completely of all charges, on law and on fact. It lessens the validity of the charge to begin with."

Treu was a bit surprised that the same government which launched the prosecution to cover up "bureaucratic bungling" by security officials was also intelligent enough to admit the case was unfounded.

"Occasionally, somebody sees the light," he added in a telephone interview from his suburban home, the scene of the RCMP raid that started the affair almost five years ago. "I don't know who made the final decision."

TREU
. . . Basford boobed

Justice Minister Marc Lalonde, who has exclusive authority to authorize official secrets prosecutions, had said in Ottawa there wasn't "sufficient ground" to appeal the decision.

Treu said this showed "Mr. Lalonde is an extremely intelligent minister." But he didn't feel the same way about former justice minister Ron Basford, who authorized the 1976 prosecution. Basford "never struck me as being intelligent," he added.

The appeals judges overturned a sessions court conviction of Treu on charges of unauthorized possession of NATO papers, which he insistently contended was necessary for completion of a contract on a NATO air-to-ground commuications system used along the air defence line in Europe.

Treu claimed all along that his security clearance had been lifted by a senior official of the federal supply and services department without his knowledge.

Last week, Supply and Services Minister Pierre de Bane said the appeals case had prompted him to order a review of security-clearance procedures.

Treu also said he had "no intention at this time" of taking Ottawa to court in a damage action to compensate him for $22,000 in legal fees, the loss of his company and the break-up of his family.

Conservative MP Gerald Baldwin, who campaigned hard against the government's handling of the case, has been pressing Justice Minister Lalonde to compensate Treu.

Treu preferred not to take legal action because the prosecution cost the government $400,000 and considerable embarassment. "I do not want to continue embarassing it."

Treu said he is on the point of starting to work again as an electronics engineer for ITT in Montreal. The company had been "very generous" in granting him a leave of absence after his April, 1978, conviction.

Treu said now that his case was over, he would actively back Baldwin's campaign to amend the Official Secrets Act and to pass a hard-nosed law on freedom of information.

Treu, who developed an international reputation while working on NATO defence project in the 1960s, has pledged that he will never accept classified work again unless the Official Secrets Act is amended.

Herbie Wins Chance at Full Life

TORONTO (CP) — The worst anxiety is over for the parents of seven-month-old Herbie Quinones after a delicate, three-hour operation Monday corrected a problem with his windpipe that had threatened to kill him.

The New York infant was in fair, stable condition in Toronto's Hospital For Sick Children late Monday and surgeon-in-chief Dr. Robert Filler said his chances of leading a normal life are good.

However, it will take three weeks of close observation before doctors know if the operation will end the choking spells caused by pressure on the baby's windpipe from the aorta and esophagus.

"We're really happy with the results," said father Herbert Quinones, 21, after the operation. "But we were a little fearful."

He said he and his wife Leticia, 24, had slept with a Bible the night before, praying for their son.

The parents did not see the operation but were able to see Herbie minutes after it was over.

"Thank God the danger is over; Herbie will be okay," they said.

Donations from Metropolitan Toronto residents made it possible for the Quinones to bring their son to Toronto for the operation after waiting for six weeks for help under New York State's medical insurance program for the poor.

They chose Dr. Filler because of his experience.

The surgeon pioneered and perfected the operation and has performed it six times before, with complete success in all but one case.

He led a team of six specialists in pulling the aortic arch of the heart forward and stitching it to the breast bone to relieve the abnormal pressure on the windpipe.

The team encountered an unexpected problem after opening the baby's chest because major blood vessels were peculiarly placed.

Instead of three arteries leading to the aortic arch, two had joined into a thick trunk connected to the heart.

The trunk had added to the pressure on Herbie's windpipe, which was "at least three-quarters shut when we started the procedure," Filler said.

There were no other complications, Dr. Filler said, and much of the three hours in the operating room was spent preparing the baby for surgery.

Inserting intravenous tubes in the tiny blood vessels was difficult.

A hospital spokesman said Herbie will stay in the intensive care unit for at least a week and will remain at the hospital for at least two or three more weeks under observation.

The child's condition arose from a birth defect in which his esophagus was improperly attached to his stomach.

A major operation earlier at Brooklyn Hospital in New York corrected that condition, but as a result, his windpipe sometimes became sandwiched between his heart and the esophagus when he ate or suffered emotional stress.

A Quebec 'Embassy'?

PARIS (CP) — Quebec may not yet be independent but it does have an embassy in France, at least in the new Paris telephone directory.

The listing in large block letters of Ambassade du Quebec (Quebec Embassy) in the recently-published directory has already come to the attention of the Canadian Embassy which is looking into the matter.

Quebec's large office here has a special status accorded by French authorities, with diplomatic perks such as the right to duty-free liquor and cars, but it has always been considered a delegation generale.

It is that designation which appears on the building, located at 66, rue Pergolese and it is under that designation that it traditionally appears in the Paris directory.

But this year, the words ambassade du Quebec are spelled out in full followed by the designation (delegation generale gouvernement). The office is also listed alphabetically as Delegation General du Quebec.

An official of the French ministry for foreign affairs made it clear in an interview Monday that the delegation was just that and not an embassy.

Controversy Kibosh Cause

OTTAWA (CP) — Copies of the Economic Council of Canada's February bulletin were ordered destroyed because it featured an article about a controversial report on bank profits published by the council, according to a senior council official.

Council director David Slater said Monday the destruction order was made because he, fellow director Robert Levesque and chairman Sylvia Ostry considered the article incomplete and unsatisfactory.

It was not because of concern about negative reaction to the report from bankers, he added.

The study, by Queens University economist Jack Mintz, said chartered banks earned up to $500 million in excess profits between 1968 and 1973.

The report was published with a disclaimer saying the findings were the responsibility of the author and had not been endorsed by the council.

There was no advance publicity or accompanying news release with the report which was dropped in the Parliamentary Press Gallery three weeks ago.

"We have known for quite some time that some people in the banking community were unhappy about aspects of Dr. Mintz's study," Slater said.

"But we published the study."

He said the disclaimer was inserted because of a policy decision at a January meeting of the 25-member council to state more clearly on reports whether they have been endorsed by the council.

The council has 25 part-time members, including academics and businessmen. Labor representatives quit two years ago.

Slater said the Mintz report contained the disclaimer but it was found the article in the council bulletin, a publicity sheet to promote the council's work, did not make it clear the council had not endorsed it.

Slater said the article in the bulletin also failed to make clear that the Mintz study had been distributed in mimeograph form more than a year ago. The article also did not contain information to update results of the study after 1973.

"We said that the bulletin is an unsatisfactory piece of work," Slater said. It was decided not to distribute it. The article was removed from the bulletin that did appear.

Also Monday, Liberal MP Herb Gray released a copy of a letter to Ostry in which he said the council's handling of the Mintz report was "puzzling to say the least and deserving of an explanation."

Gray said he couldn't understand why the Mintz report carried the disclaimer since its findings appeared similar to a report issued in the council's name in 1976.

The report entitled Efficiency and Regulation: A Study of Deposit Institutions, said before tax profit rates in banking have been "far higher than in manufacturing or in trust companies every year since 1967 and, on average, over the period 1968-73."

Ventilation Rig Suspected In Mine Blast

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — A temporary breakdown in the ventilation system that allowed an accumulation of methane gas is the probable cause of a weekend mine disaster here which killed 10 miners, Arnold Miller, president of the United Mine Workers of America (UMW), said Monday.

The blast occured early Saturday morning at the Cape Breton Development Corp. (Devco) No. 26 colliery here. Miller, who was in West Virginia when he heard of the accident, said in a interview that this is the first disaster he has had to deal with in seven years.

"There's no question that there was an accumulation of methane," he said. "Otherwise, there would not have been an explosion."

Miller spent all day Monday interviewing Devco and union officials about information they have obtained during two days of investigation in the mine level known as 12 South where the explosion occurred.

"Their detailed analysis of what happened further corroborated what I think caused the disaster, and that is a temporary breakdown in the ventiliation system allowed an accumulation in an area which was not being checked by monitors."

Miller said a further investigation may show what caused the ignition and where the gas accumulated.

But, he added, it's possible the ignition came from a spark caused by the shearer, a machine which claws coal from the mine face, striking a sulphur ball.

"It could have been the size of a marble and that would explain why no-one has found the cause. But, it would have made a spark big enough to cause ignition."

Devco's says its investigation so far is inconclusive.

Meanwhile, two top investigators of Britain's National Coal Board are scheduled to go into the mines today in search of answers to where the blast occurred and what caused it.

Hospital officials in Halifax said Monday night the condition of the six critically-injured miners who were taken from the mine Saturday remains unchanged.

Civic Holiday Set

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — A civic holiday will be held here and in nearby areas Wednesday as a tribute to the 10 miners who died Saturday in the explosion at No. 26 colliery, Mayor Dan Munroe said Monday.

Memorial services will be held at 2 p.m. today co-ordinated by Rev. Donald MacDonald of Warden United Church and Rev. Bruce Hope of St. Mary's Anglican Church.

Rev. Robert Floyd of St. John's Church, who gave last rites to the 10 dead miners and six others who were badly burned, will be the guest speaker.

Munroe said a memorial fund has been established to help the families of the victims of the explosion.

Meanwhile, funeral services will be held today for nine of the 10 miners killed. The funeral for Michael Fabian Young, 48, will be held Wednesday.

Wheel of Fortune Spinning for Susan

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Whether it's game shows, network newscasts, variety shows or beauty contests, the top banana in this enlightened age of feminism is almost always a man.

One of the exceptions, and therefore a rarity, is Susan Stafford, hostess of NBC-TV's daily Wheel of Fortune show. Even then, Susan shares the spotlight with Chuck Woolery.

Susan, who isn't an ardent feminist herself, is appalled that women in show business are lagging behind their sisters in other professions.

"So far as I know," she said, "I'm the only network hostess in television.

"Local TV game shows and news programs are different. They hire women on that level but not on a national level. Even when Barbara Walters became the highest paid news personality she wasn't accepted as the number one broadcaster on ABC news.

"They made her an interviewer. Not taking anything away from Barbara, but anyone can be an interviewer with a little research. I know; I was a syndicated broadcaster myself for three years.

"There's no such thing as an anchor woman on network news but there are plenty of anchor men.

"The networks are afraid to take a chance on females in charge of a show on camera or in the capacity of hostess. And I think I know why.

"There is an old belief that women don't want to watch women. It's not the men who object to women in a dominant situation.

"But I think that's a contradiction. Women certainly tune in to see Charlie's Angels. They enjoy seeing the clothes, the hairdos in addition to watching three beautiful women in fantasy situations.

"However, put those same actresses into real life roles as hostesses or broadcasters and it's a different story.

"I think a good many women viewers resent females taking over traditional male jobs. Personally, I don't see it that way. Every woman is a hostess in her own home and playing that role on television is a simple extension of doing what comes naturally.

"The key to being a successful TV hostress is to be yourself. If you make a mistake, the audience is with you. In fact, they usually like you better because it adds a human quality.

"There are millions of women who haven't careers of their own. If they're bored with themselves it frustrates them to see other women on TV who have accomplished more with their lives."

Susan, whose youthful beauty has been an asset to her career, recalled only two other game show hostesses in the recent past, Elaine Stewart on Gambit and Ruta Lee on High Rollers. Neither show is still on the air.

Before coming to Hollywood, Susan founded a talent agency in Kansas City and studied acting in New York. She is the wife of television executive Dick Ebersol, who has nothing to do with Wheel of Fortune.

Susan is part of Hollywood's "born again" community and supports the Equal Right Amendment. But she thinks women are subtly discriminated against in show business.

"There are a lot of talented ladies not getting their share of exposure on the tube itself. The women's movement has helped, but there's a long way to go before we have a female Johnny Carson or Merv Griffin on the air.

"It's true that women are highly visible in many top shows but their presence is still based on sexuality more than talent.

"But who said it takes talent to be on television? It takes luck — and I've been lucky — and persistence. It certainly takes more than beauty. I know dozens of talented, good looking women who are starving in this town.

"I think we're at least 10 years away from public acceptance of a woman as a personality figure on a network basis."

Scott's World

"Well, I don't think women resent me because they can see I'm enjoying myself, making a living, doing fashions and being pretty," she said. "I also think they know I care about every one of them.

"My relationship with Chuck (Woolery) is right up front, too. He's the dominant male but I'm not the inferior woman. Other women can appreciate that."

INTRODUCING BUDGET BUYS

A better Answer to Quality and Savings

NO NAME PRODUCTS — THEY'RE NOT FOR US

WE HAVE BEEN CONSIDERING WHETHER OR NOT TO CARRY NO NAME PRODUCTS (PRODUCTS PACKAGED WITHOUT BRAND NAMES). WE HAVE DECIDED THEY ARE NOT A TRUE BARGAIN FOR OUR CUSTOMERS AND MEMBERS, AT THIS TIME, BECAUSE:

1) The Quality is inconsistent. The products are purchased from whichever company currently has a surplus.
2) The supply is Not Dependable. At no time were we able to obtain more than 50% of the listed items.
3) Savings are Minimal. Equivalent Co-op and Harmonie products (our "house labels") on our shelves were the same or lower in price than many of the No Name Products.

BUDGET BUYS — A BETTER ALTERNATIVE

To overcome the above problems and offer our shoppers a large number of products of consistent, guaranteed quality at significant savings, we have decided to introduce BUDGET BUYS.

Herring Men Accept New Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia herring fishermen have voted 55.5 per cent in favor of a new contract for the 1979 herring roe season, the United Fisherman and Allied Workers Union said Monday.

In addition, payments into the welfare fund of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will go up 50 cents a ton to $3 a ton.

Seattle Speaker

Hartley Kruger, executive vice-president of the Seattle/King County Convention and Visitors Bureau will be guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Greater Victoria Visitor Information Centre March 6 at the Empress Hotel.

He has been in the travel industry since 1959 when he became assistant manager of th Washington State Department of Commerce and Economic Development, a post which he held for seven years.

Protocol Won't Silence Me: Schreyer

Governor-General Edward Schreyer, in his first visit to Victoria, says he will continue to speak out on matters of primary concern to Canadians.

He made the comment Monday during a red carpet visit to City Hall where he met Mayor Mike Young and other Victoria-area civic officials.

The governor-general was criticized for being political when he raised the unity issue shortly after he was sworn into office.

Schreyer, answering a question by a reporter on the subject of national unity, said it is in order for the Queen's representative to speak out on basic public issues outside the partisan area.

Things like the essential unity of the nation are by nature political and not partisan, he said.

Schreyer said he must address himself to all Canadians on the important issues of the day, such as long-term energy supply, to make the country face problems squarely.

The Schreyers were greeted by fresh-cut daffodils in the city council chamber and a welcoming group which included Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young, Victoria alderman, their wives, some children and members of City Hall senior staff.

Schreyer said coming to Victoria for the first time in mid-winter, while the Prairies have below zero temperatures, enabled him to appreciate more of the diversity of Canada.

"We can see with our own eyes it is not an exaggeration that you can see green grass in February."

Mayor Young presented Schreyer and his wife Lily with a Fenwick Lansdowne painting of a brown owl and asked him to sign the formal inscription marking the occasion in the city's golden book.

Schreyer reciprocated with an illustrated history of Canada's governors-general, titled Rideau Hall.

Young said for all its separate character from other parts of the nation, B.C. is no less Canadian in its allegiance and ties with the rest of Canada.

The governor-general is a potent force to keep the provinces bound together like a book, he said.

The vice-regal party today visited Pearson College today and later attended a memorial service for former premier W.A.C. Bennett.

The Schreyers also took a tour of Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt and HMC Dockyard.

The governor-general arrived at Patricia Bay airport a little ahead of time Monday morning after overcast briefly made it uncertain whether his turbo-prop aircraft could land.

He was greeted by Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving, a salute was fired by 5th West Coast Battery and he inspected a 120-man guard from Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Wednesday the governor-general officially opens the Institute of Ocean Sciences, attends a Canadian Club meeting at the Empress Hotel and visits the legislature before leaving at 3:30 to open the B.C. winter games at Kamloops.

New Look at Water Crisis

The water supply problems of homeowners on Clayton Road in North Saanich will be given a second look, the chairman of North Saanich's water committee said today.

James Cumming said he will bring the matter up at the next meeting of the committee in three weeks time.

Cumming's comment comes in the wake of growing concern among the 15 residents on Clayton Road over the supply of water in their area.

Spokesman William Latimer said there are times when his family hasn't even enough water to wet their toothbrushes.

Latimer blames the problems on a deep agricultural well nearby which, he contends, has drastically lowered the water table.

Cumming said it was ridiculous the 15 Clayton Road residents are being excluded from the muncipality's piped water distribution system.

Municipal council has refused to extend the line unless the residents pay the bulk of the estimated $55,400 cost.

"We're going to have to recognize these properties will have to be served with water sooner or later," Cumming said. "The municipality has an obligation to do so."

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood is opposed to the move and has tried to exert pressure on the provincial government to set restrictions on the flow from farmers' deep wells, something the government has indicated it does not want to do.

Both the Peninsula Water Commission and the provincial environment ministry feel well water should be reserved primarily for agriculture and suggest all homes should be supplied by piped water.

Cumming said the cost of supplying piped water to Clayton Road is insignifcant compared to the $6.5 million that will be spent on the new water line under construction in the peninsula.

B.C. Welfare Rolls Doubled: Brown

The number of employable people on welfare in B.C. has almost doubled since 1975 under the Social Credit administration, NDP human resources critic Rosemary Brown said Monday.

She said there were 22,000 employable people on welfare when the NDP left office.

"Now (Human Resources Minister Grace) McCarthy has revealed that there are 40,000 employables on welfare, and she has the audacity to claim that there are more poor people under socialism," Mrs. Brown said in a news release.

"This Social Credit government campaigned during the last election that they would reduce the number of people on welfare in B.C. They also promised that they would not have government overruns. They have failed on both counts."

She said the human resources ministry will have spent $588.6 million which is an increase of $113.4 million over what was spent by the NDP in its last year of office.

Taxman After Tips. . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Revenue Canada is pursuing hotel employees who do not report tips as part of their income, Rod Jamieson, a federal investigator, said Monday.

Jamieson said employees at one city hotel have not reported tips amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

On Monday, John Carroll, a Vancouver waiter, was fined $1,200 for not reporting tips totalling $13,993 or about half of his annual tips.

Shawnigan Camp Given $25,000

Camp Shawnigan, which replaces the handicapped camp on Lake Cowichan, will accommodate up to 560 handicapped children and adults at seven camps of 10 days each.

Chairman of the Lions board, Robert labron said the grant will enable the society to pay off two major financial encumberances, leaving a relatively small mortgage on the property.

Indian Chance Rated Lower

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Indian women in British Columbia have a 25 per cent greater likelihood of dying during pregnancy and their children, if they survive, a 33 per cent greater chance of having birth defects, Dr. Rita Bakan said today.

Dr. Bakan, a nursing and health instructor at British Columbia Institute of Technology, said poor nutrition and substandard housing apparently were the main causes of the problem. She added her research was carried out on British Columbia statistics, but the situation was probably the same throughout Canada.

"The relation between nutrition and pre-natal conditions is clear. There is no doubt about the causes," she said.

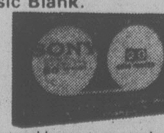
Announcing what to use when and when to use what

At Sony we have two goals.
We want our tape to reproduce sound clearly.
And we want to explain it clearly.

Basic Blank.



The workhorse tape, technically, called Low Noise- don't trouble yourself why. It's for those times when you just want to get it down.
In school, a boring lecture on 'The history of the thank-you note through the ages.'
In the office, yet another budget meeting. In the car for your cassette player.

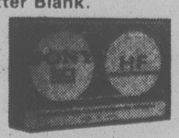
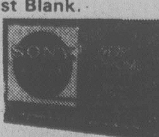
Better Blank.



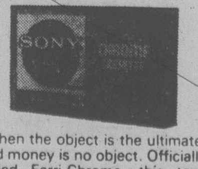
While Basic Blank is primarily for speech recording, Better Blank is primarily for music. (Its technical name is Hi Fidelity, one of the few technical names to explain anything.)
Better Blank is sensitive to a wide dynamic range- which means the lows and the highs. It's particularly valid in the bass register- and it won't hurt too much at the cash register.
Better Blank is not Ultimate Blank, but you can still use it in a living room, concert hall, or off a record.

Best Blank.



If you want to sound knowledgeable, call it Chromium Dioxide. A thin coating of that substance makes this tape loyal and faithful in the high frequency range.
So piccolos will sound perfect. Lead singers, sublime.
Use this tape when quality- particularly in the high range- is the highest priority.

Beautiful Music Blank.



When the object is the ultimate, and money is no object. Officially called Ferri-Chrome, this tape offers low distortion and a wide, flat frequency response.
It combines Chromium Dioxide, to pick up the highs, with Ferric Oxide- so the lows reach new heights. There is no better tape to reproduce music.
But do you need Ferri-Chrome? Some say that only the Verri-Crazy can tell the difference. But it's nice to know that the difference is there- if you have the ears to hear it.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Victoria Not Niagara Belt

GARDENING

jack beastall

"For what reason, if any, is fruit tree pruning delayed until the end of February in this part of Canada?

"I spent 20-odd years on the Niagara Peninsula, the fruit-growing belt of Ontario, and can vouch that fruit tree pruning in gardens and orchards is started as soon as the the ground is covered with snow and is continued, if necessary throughout the winter in temperatures far below any experienced here.

"I am told the same practice is followed by orchardists in the interior fruit-growing areas of B.C. Why is it not desirable to prune fruit trees during the mild winters here on the west coast when it is acceptable in areas of cold to severe winters?"

The answer to this reader's letter is the same as the answer to many gardening questions asked by newcomers from other parts of Canada — everything depends on the climate.

There are may types of climates associated with a large mass of land. The western marine climate is less severe than the eastern marine climate, because the eastern section is affected by the continental climate as weather moves from west to east.

The central portions of a continent is the coldest because temperatures are not moderated by air currents from a large ocean where water temperatures are higher than land temperatures.

The lower portion of the east coast of Vancouver Island has a modified Mediterranean climate, approximately from Victoria to Courtenay, the most northerly part of the world where this type of climate prevails.

The type of climate in a given area has an effect on plants and plant growth.

A continental climate is considered a stable climate. During autumn the temperature gradually falls from mild to the cold of winter and remains in the cold to very cold brackets.

During the slow temperature drop in autumn, the fruit trees have time to change starches to a sugar solution which makes them more tolerant to cold, and the winter temperatures remain far below that at which trees will be activated into growth. Pruning may be done in temperatures down to minus 18° C., or zero on the older Fahrenheit scale, without any harm to the trees.

The modified Mediterranean climate is totally unstable, fluctuating from mild and wet to clear and frosty every few days. There is no gradual and definite change from autumn to winter nor from winter to spring, but there are occasional outbreaks of Arctic air which arrive suddenly and last from seven to fourteen days. This is when our plants are severely damaged.

Fruit trees here on the coast continue making starch because the transition period of the continental climate is not present. The lack of the necessary sugar leaves the trees subject to damage by cold.

The trees are never truly dormant as in a cold climate. They lose their foliage, but growth is activated, if not visable, in every mild spell.

If the trees were pruned in early winter and growth activated in a mild spell, this growth would be killed during an Arctic outbreak in January. As the trees had already been pruned, the part to be killed would be the wood that should be the crop for the coming season.

In a marine or a modified Mediterranean climate, pruning should not be done before the average temperature is 5° C. or higher if we want to be reasonably sure the trees will not be damaged.

By the end of February we consider the worst of our winter weather is over, but occasionally we have to wait until mid-March when the weather does not co-operate with our man-made gardening schedule.

And Jerry Woytack, a senior financial analyst with treasury board, has been named assistant deputy for finance and administration.

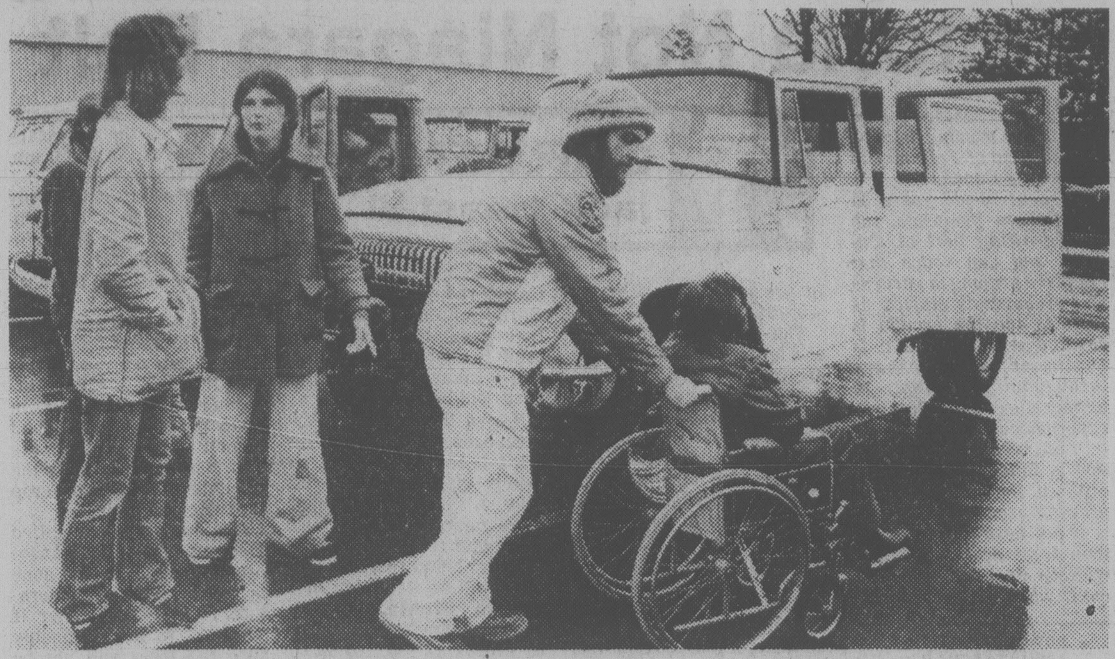
THE DAILY COLONIST AND VICTORIA TIMES



AUTO EXCURSION may not be most people's idea of a day's outing but for members of the Victoria Handicapped Recreation Society, off-road adventure provided by Victoria 4-Wheel Drive Club was something special. Ten handicapped persons, including Jill Geiger, shown here trying out one of the vehicles, went on country-style jaunt that took them to Leechtown and featured a luncheon provided by the four-wheel folk. Vehicles are built to travel in tough terrain and outing was far from a routine Sunday drive. But as one guest said, that's what made the whole thing fun and a day to remember. (John McKay photos)

Firebomb 14

VANCOUVER (CP) - Seven persons escaped injury early today when a Molotov cocktail exploded in a central Vancouver house.

It was the 14th firebomb attack here in recent weeks, but the first against a residence. Other targets have been banks and federal government offices.

Police said the house was hit by two Molotov cocktails.

FIERCE THREE-DAY BATTLE

Viets Fight in China

Times News Services

Vietnam has struck back at China, sending forces 24 kilometres deep into Chinese territory, but the attack has been repulsed, the official Chinese Hsinhua News Agency reported today.

The news agency said Chinese and Vietnamese forces fought for three days in the Ninming area of the Kwangsi Chuan autonomous region and the Chinese killed 68 Vietnamese troops and captured one.

This is the first time China has reported Vietnamese intrusions into its border provinces since Feb 17 when it launched its attacks into Vietnam.

The attack began last Friday when a battalion of Vietnamese troops attacked communes in Ningming, firing more than 200 shells, the agency said.

The Vietnamese burnt two villages and a large area of forestland, killing many Chinese civilians and damaging houses, the agency added.

At the height of the offensive, the Vietnamese occupied a six-kilometre stretch of highway and a hill, the agency said.

Earlier, Peking sources said the invading Chinese forces were under orders not to advance more than 50 kilometres from the border. They said fighting is being staged within a 20 kilometre radius from the frontier.

Chinese and Vietnamese forces also fought slogging battles across three northern mountain provinces today in stepped-up clashes. China claimed 17,000 Vietnamese casualties in the war, said it had knocked out seven missile bases.

The Japanese news agency Kyodo reporting from Peking said China claimed it had disabled or destroyed or disabled seven missile bases.

Kyodo quoted official documents saying "several thousand" Vietnamese prisoners of war — the first China has reported taking — have been taken into Chinese territory.

The battles are now "heavier than before with large numbers of troops apparently involved on both ... sides," a U.S. State Department spokesman said in Washington Monday.

The spokesman said the Vietnamese "appear to be reinforcing units in the

Plants and shrubs strewn on ground after vandalism rampage at 747 Fort

Break-In Rash in City

Thieves and vandals hit nearly a dozen businesses in Victoria overnight and while little was taken, damage is reckoned is the thousands of dollars.

Plants and bushes were uprooted in the lobby of a building at 747 Fort and across the alley at 734 Broughton doors were smashed, desks opened and a safe damaged.

There were also break-ins at McGill and Orme at Fort and Richmond, Le Premier Restaurant at 506 Fort and Corner Confectionery at 501 Government.

Dave Patterson, office manager of the law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm, owners of the Broughton Street building, estimates about $3,000 damage was done to office furnishings.

He said thieves apparently picked the lock in the front door and then made their way through the first two floors of the building, entering the offices of Midland Dougherty, Monarch Life, Investor's Syndicate, and several lawyers' offices.

"They hit every office in the building, except those on the third floor. They couldn't get to them because the elevator was locked," Patterson said.

Nothing, however, appeared to be taken.

"I think they were looking for cash only," he said. "But nothing of value is ever kept overnight in the building."

He said an unsuccessful attempt was made to jimmy open a safe in the back of Investor's Syndicate.

Police said the thieves went empty-handed in the other break-ins as well.

GNP Rose By 3.4% In 1978

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian economy grew by 3.4 per cent in 1978, up slightly from 2.7 per cent growth in 1977, Statistics Canada reported today.

The federal agency said Gross National Product (GNP), the value of all goods and services produced in the country, rose to $231.8 billion.

That was 10.3 per cent higher than in 1977 but real growth, after taking into account inflation, was only 3.4 per cent.

Although the GNP increase was higher than in 1977, it fell well short of Finance Minister Jean Chretien's prediction.

Statistics Canada said about half the increase in the country's total production was the result of an 8.5-per-cent real increase in exports, which "had a positive effect on profits and employment in export-oriented industries."

The effect of improved exports, however, was offset by a 4.1-per-cent increase in the volume of imports which rose despite an increase of 12.7 per cent in import prices.

Statistics Canada said real growth in the fourth quarter was at a sluggish annual rate of 1.8 per cent.

Begin Snub Puts Summit on Ice

Times News Services

The White House today expressed "grave concern" over Israel's decision not to send Prime Minister Menachem Begin to a Mideast summit meeting scheduled at Camp David this week.

The refusal of both Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to meet at the request of President Carter means there will be no such "summit."

Although Carter had no immediate personal comment, White House officials were obviously concerned about the effect on peace prospects in the Middle East.

"We're in the process of making sure we fully understand what has taken place," said a White House official, noting that Begin had promised to communicate with Carter on the move.

"The initial reaction here was of grave concern about what this decision means to the peace process," the official said.

But Begin said he would be willing at any time to meet with Carter concerning relations between the United States and Israel.

Begin said it was evident to the cabinet that in the five days of minsterial level talks in Washington "no progress was made toward an Israeli-Egyptian agreement. On the contrary, a more extreme position was presented by the Egyptian delegation."

The cabinet voted 14-2 to reject the invitation temporarily because "it would be inappropriate for Begin to take part in the talks under the current conditions," the sources said.

The sources said the cabinet ministers were upset that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was not to participate in the meeting.

The cabinet decision was certain to anger Carter, who reportedly planned to convene the summit with Begin and Egyptian prime minister Mustapha Khalil as early as Thursday.

Begin said Khalil insisted on the adoption of the Egyptian proposals.

"Under these circumstances, the cabinet decided thar the prime minister is not in a position to participate in the proposed meeting with Dr. Khalil," Begin said in a prepared statement.

But the cabinet left an opening for Begin to go to Washington immediately, if necessary, if Carter wanted to see him about its decision.

"The prime minister is prepared at any time convenient to President Carter to leave for the United States to meet with the president to discuss matters related to the peace-making process, original issues in the context of recent developments and questions concerning the bilateral relations between the United States and Israel," Begin said.

He declined to answer reporters' questions.

The stunning Israeli decision came during a five-hour cabinet session.

Carter Asks Power To Ration Gasoline

Times News Services

President Carter has asked Congress for authority to order coupon-type gasoline rationing and three other mandatory conservation measures for use in severe energy emergencies, the Energy Department said today.

In addition to rationing of the kind last used during the Second World War, Carter's proposed standby measures to force fuel savings include weekend service station closings, temperature limits for public buildings and a ban on nonessential advertising lights and lighted store window displays.

Imposing all the steps short of rationing would save more than 500,000 barrels of oil a day, department analysts said.

Carter sent copies of his request to key members of Congress Monday but delayed public announcement of details until today to assure lawmakers got the first word. Formal transmission of the requests was scheduled for March 1, the first day both the House and Senate will be in session.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia announced today it will not raise oil prices during the first quarter of this year.

The Saudi announcement came one day after Kuwait told customers it was adding nine per cent to its current price of $13.35 a barrel, raising it to about $14.55 a barrel.

In Kuwait, U.S. warnings that it will use military force in the Persian Gulf region if necessary to protect Middle East oil supplies have provoked angry reaction.

Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah said he resents the statements, made Sunday by Defence Secretary Harold Brown and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

Hassan Nazih, the new director of the Iranian National Iranian Oil Co., said at a news conference today that Iran will sell its first exported oil next week on the spot market to the highest bidder and hopes to get $18 to $20 a barrel.

This would be $4.65 to $6.65 more than the current base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

"At this moment, there are several foreign tankers in Iranian waters ready to take on oil," said Nazih. "These are expected to dock within a few days."

The Saudi announcement also called for an urgent meeting of oil exporters and consumers "to regulate consumption and stabilize oil prices, to save the world from a possible economic relapse."

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter and traditionally has been a moderate in pricing decisions of OPEC.

Venezuela also has announced a price increase for several types of oil used primarily for powering factories and electrical generators, an increase that might mean a five-cent-a-gallon rise in the price.

ICBC PROFIT 'REALLY A LOSS'

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. would end the year with a loss of $15 million rather than a surplus of $22 million if the government subsidy was included in the final figures, an NDP MLA said today.

Dennis Cocke, the party's ICBC critic, said ICBC president Robbie Sherrell is earning his $80,000 annual salary by totalling confusing everyone with his projected profits.

Sherrell said Monday that ICBC had revenues of $366 million and paid out $344 million in claims and costs for a net surplus of $22 million.

Sherrell said the figures represent a turn around from last year's $8 million deficit.

But Cocke said the true revenues are $366 million in premiums plus $40 million in investment income (largely from the half billion dollars in claims reserves) for a total income of $406 million.

Expenditures include the $343 million in claims plus another $60 million in administrative costs.

This would result in the corporation ending the year $3 million in the black, but Cocke said the government is subsidizing ICBC by $18 million so the true overall loss would be $15 million this year.

Cocke was referring to the $181 million that the government gave ICBC three years ago.

But the next day ICBC loaned the money back to the provincial treasury at an interest rate of 10 per cent.

Since the taxpayer is paying that interest — $18 million per year — to ICBC that sum must be included in calculating ICBC profits or losses, Cocke said.

Steaks to Steel Price Probe Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — A special commission to investigate price increases for everything from steaks to steel and to order reductions in unjustified charges is needed to prevent even higher inflation rates, Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader said Monday.

He told reporters he would propose a Fair Prices Commission in a special Commons debate today. The commission would have few bureaucrats and would concentrate on keeping price changes in line with wage

If price increases were not moderated, workers would start demanding higher contract settlements, he said.

That would push inflation above the nine-per-cent rate of 1978.

Earlier in the Commons, Broadbent was assured by Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand that the government will investigate why flour prices have shot above levels expected when the government ended a bread subsidy at the end of 1978.

The NDP has asked the government to justify increases in many food prices. And it has asked it to look into rising costs of steel and lumber which are adding to the price of new houses.

Allmand said there was little Ottawa could do now that the Anti-Inflation Board was on the wane but that he would investigate.

At the same time, he accused Broadbent of asking questions on obscure topics and "aiming questions not for information but for emotion."

"Any fool can get up and ask a question in this House," Allmand said. It was harder to analyze the circumstances behind price rises.

Broadbent replied that it "would take a particular fool to give that answer." The minister should be honest with the public and admit "the government has no intention of doing anything about food prices."

That, Allmand said, was another facile suggestion.

Government agencies reported bullish food price increases of 21 per cent in 1978. Beef price increases started a stampede in other meat prices. The devalued dollar also pushed up the cost of imported fruit and vegetables. Food prices rose 1.9 per cent in January.

Broadbent said the government should also investigate why retail chicken prices have climbed 35 per cent in the last year while returns to farmers for birds have gone up onls 12.5 per cent. It appeared to be classic case of middlemen profiteering at the expense of farmer and consumer.

Allmand said the national marketing boards for chickens and turkeys are expected to increase production to help ease price increases. But Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said there now is more poultry available than there was at the start of 1978.

TOWN TALK

Recent animalistic exhibitions by patrons of the University of Victoria's campus pub put some wear and tear on the decor and almost resulted in closure, but Alma Mater Society manager Dave Clode says things are begining to cool down.

The brawl capped a series of riotous antics that put two people in hospital and broke windows and doors in the Student Union Building.

The AMS will not hire bouncers and hopes the students themselves will help quell future disturbances.

And speaking of the SUB Pub . . . a Town Talk agent who visited the establishment was shocked by the crass, institutional and totally unimaginative decor of the place.

Bare tables, bleak brick dividing walls and no pictures. Indeed there is not a spark of creativity or taste in the entire pub area — and this on a university campus where imagination is supposed to flourish!

The place seems designed to withstand a maximum amount of abuse and consequently looks like a bomb shelter. Could it be the atmosphere is at least partly to blame for the behavior of patrons.

Rumors have been circulating recently that MacMillan Bloedel has been expressing interest in logging some of the giant old Douglas Firs that are the main attraction of the park.

"No suggestion like that has ever come on my desk," said Lee. "If it did you'd hear me screaming."

Lee said the rumors could have started because M-B has been logging in a valley behind the park.

City hall's self-styled watchdog Joe Richards has come up with many an idea to improve the administration of the city of Victoria, but the one he suggested last week is so simple it's amazing someone hasn't thought of it before.

Richards noted that a leading cause of traffic accidents is drivers running yellow lights. Instead of constant campaigns to make drivers stop faster, he said, why not just lengthen the time of the yellow light from the current four seconds to, perhaps, six. That way drivers would almost always clear the intersection even if they had started across on the yellow.

Traffic chairman Ald. Bill McElroy promised to look into the possibility.

They Want To Know

Parent Finders

The Risky, Relentless Quest Goes On

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The four women sit around a table in the modest duplex. They are very different, yet in an unusual way there are strong similarities.

They all belong to Parent Finders, a group of adopted adults, blood relatives and adopting parents.

They are all participating in a common search . . . for a natural parent.

Two have succeeded. Two are still hoping.

One still waiting is Robyn Wallace. All she has found out to date is that her mother was English, 17, unmarried and lived on a Saskatchewan farm.

Unlike the other three, she was not adopted. She lived with an aunt for three years until the aunt died. She then went from one foster home to another until at 14 she was out on her own earning 43 cents an hour as a waitress.

Wallace says, while there are more women than men searching for relatives, there are still many men who feel the need to search for their beginnings.

Shirley Griffith has been searching for five years. All she has found out in those years is that her parents lived in Vancouver, were separated in 1947 and that her mother "went to the courts and tried to fight for me" but was considered too unstable to have her.

Wallace, 38, says she would respect her mother's wishes if she should find her and discover for whatever reason, such as marriage and another family, that the reunion was not wanted. But she has to know.

Barbara Trowsdale and Annette Smith-Dalrymple consider themselves the lucky ones. Their searches were successful but fraught with frustration and made almost impossible by denied information.

"We have no medical backgrounds. I didn't have any idea of what kind of a bloodline I was handing down," Trowsdale says, looking at her small son John on her lap.

Trowsdale says her adoptive parents also were afraid she would get hurt but she found her sister and mother after a two-year search and says the bonds with her adoptive parents are more secure than ever.

Her search was made easier by the fact she knew her father had drowned. An account of the drowning on Feb. 13, 1961, was her first important clue.

Smith-Dalrymple was born in the Alaskan fishing village of Naknek. There were four older children. Her father, who had a violent temper, didn't believe she was his so she was put up for adoption.

"I was reunited with my father on Valentine Day, 1976. He knew he had been wrong for 23 years," she says.

Her search cost her $1,000 in legal fees and she still has to go to Washington to get her birth certificate.

Although their search is over, she and Trowsdale are avid supporters of Parent Finders, which has its national and provincial headquarters in Vancouver where the organization was formed in August, 1974.

Members help each other search for their parents and a large registry being compiled in Vancouver grows almost daily.

"There are an awful lot of us," Trowsdale says. "There are 398,000 adoptees in Canada so it is not surprising that it has grown so fast."

The B.C. Parent Finders recently presented a brief to the provincial government's children's legislative committee asking that all pertinent medical history of the biological family and obstetrical history be made available to adoptive parents. It also asked for a system to obtain on-going medical information.

At present the records give only birth information and a report on the child within six months before adoption.

Parent Finders say new legislation must recognize blood ties.

"With the release of relevant information to adult adoptees, they would then know whether there were any blood ties with an intended spouse," says Norma Robinson of Port Coquitlam, provincial president.

The purpose of the provincial government's proposed Family and Child Services Act is to protect children from neglect and abuse and to provide assistance to families where the normal development of children is at risk.

"Yet the Adoption Act is only once mentioned as part of a list of related legislation," Robinson says.

"We are all children," Trowsdale says of adoptees, "I would have wanted to find my mother — even if she was an ex-con or a prostitute.

"Thanks to the love and understanding of my adoptive parents my own search took two years but had a very happy ending."

Creek Spillage Tracked Down

An oil spill in Colquitz Creek Monday was caused by heating oil from an overfilled tank at the Parkside Place condominium complex, according to a spokesman for the Pollution Control Branch.

PCB regional manager Bill Thomas said the tank was overfilled Sunday by an oil company trank, and the excess oil entered a storm culvert to pour into the creek at the rate of about half a gallon a minute.

He said the manager of the apartment building across the road from the creek would be asked to arrange construction of a small dike around the tank's filling spout, to prevent further incidents.

Saanich municipal workers placed absorbent material in the creek Monday afternoon, to catch the oil still flowing from the storm drain.

A biologist working to restock the Colquitz and other Saanich creeks with fish said such spills pose a danger to the sports fishery program.

Labor Rally At Buildings Up in Air

The B.C. Federation of Labor has had to change its plans for a demonstration this month in Victoria to protest recent changes to essential services legislation.

The federation had planned to hold a demonstration in conjunction with the opening of the spring session of the legislature, but since there has been no announcement of when the session will begin, the labor body is trying to arrange another course of action.

Joy Langan, who is organizing the essential services rallies, said Monday the federation has written to the government asking for a meeting with the cabinet.

The labor body would use the occasion to present a brief on the essential services question.

So far, the federation hasn't heard back from the government, Langan said.

She wouldn't say whether there will be a demonstration at the Legislative Buildings the same day federation officers meet the cabinet.

There have been seven rallies so far and the next one is planned for March 7 in Vancouver.

The federation organized the rallies to protest a government move late last year placing all public sector employees under the umbrella of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Organized labor feels that action effectively removes free collective bargaining rights from 34,000 public employees in the province.

Labor leaders have been warning those attending the rallies to date that the Socred administration's action is just the first step toward right-to-work legislation which would allow employees to work anywhere in the province and not have to join a union.

Trustees Grind It Out . . . Slowly

LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Greater Victoria school board wrangled for 2½ hours Monday night but only scratched a weighty agenda before the 10:30 adjournment deadline rolled around.

Chairman Carol Pickup told the board she had mailed letters to staff and community and parent groups inviting nominations for positions on the education commission.

She said she was asked by planning committee chairman Win Mott to send letters to the Greater Victoria Teachers Association, Canadian Union of Public Employees, students councils, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Confederation of Parent Associations inviting nominations to the commission.

Local parent-teacher associations were added to the list Monday at the request of Trustee Peter Yorke, who said the invitations had been sent secretly to select groups without board knowledge.

The board will meet tonight to select a salaried commissioner to co-ordinate the $15,000 study.

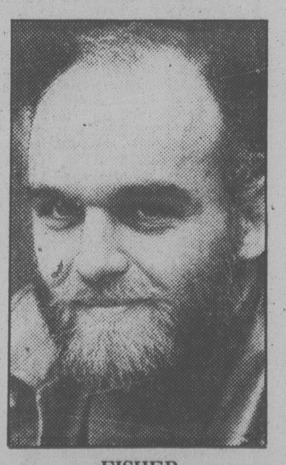
The commission will conduct an in-depth study of district needs and resources. It is expected to complete by October a report that will include future planning recommendations.

After a long debate, the board decided to establish guidelines for district-wide testing, a motion made by Trustee Dr. Mark Fisher.

He said tests should be used as tools to evaluate the core curriculum, rather than for punishment or promotion of students.

He said in a notice of motion that district standards should be established for each grade in reading, math, oral communications and written communication.

The only way to measure the effectiveness of the core curriculum is to know what students should be capable of achieving in each grade, said Fisher, who described the present system as a "stone-age process."



FISHER
. . . testing guidelines

Standards and testing in the district lack cohesiveness, he charged.

"It's a dog's breakfast."

Fisher said administration should determine how district test results will be used to improve the curriculum to meet educational standards.

After another lengthy debate on a provincial government enrichment program for gifted students the board unanimously decided to apply to become ivolved in it.

The experimental project will be implemented in September in B.C. school districts showing the most interest.

Trustee Martin Levin, who made the notice of motion, said learning disabled students rightly receive attention and money and it's time school districts provided challenging programs to stimulate bright students.

Trustee Winn Mott said it would be a great waste not to implement the program.

"One of the failings of the public school system is its enshrinement of the mediocre," he commented.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables said Greater Victoria already has trained teachers to provide programs for gifted students and that the district leads the province in scholarship.

Stables told trustees he didn't want them to think Victoria is the "backwater of the world and that your children have been learning in spite of the education system.

There is no guarantee the education ministry will have the supplementary curriculum for gifted students ready by September, he said.

Although the ministry will supply the curriculum and texts, the district would probably have to foot the bill for training teachers and for field trips, according to Stables.

Trustee John Young, who didn't vote, said gifted kids are winners who don't need extra help.

"They win all the scholarships, they go on to university; they win everything," Young said.

Fired Ferry Captain Arbitration Resumes

An arbitration hearing into the firing of a B.C. Ferry Corp. captain resumed today in Vancouver.

The hearing, which began in Victoria in January, had been adjourned pending a decision by the B.C. Court of Appeal on an application by the corporation to have a Powell River newspaper editor fined or jailed for refusing to disclose her sources.

The court hearing was postponed indefinitely earlier this month but is scheduled to resume March 19.

The ferry corporation is asking the court to rule against Wendy Fitzgibbons, 31, editor of the Powell River News for refusing to disclose the source of a story about a ferry docking collision about 30 kilometres south of Powell River last September.

The collision first was blamed on mechanical malfunction, but following an internal inquiry into the incident the corporation fired Captain Gerry Stalling, master of the Queen of the Islands.

Ask the Times

Q. A friend and I were shelling some mussels when we discovered that a number of them had crabs imbedded in their meat. These were normal crabs, thumbnail in in size, each draped around a mass of small orange eggs. My friend says the crabs were laying the eggs, using the mussels as host environment. I say the mussels were laying the eggs, and the crabs were feeding on them. Who is right? A.J.C.

A. Your friend. The crabs are known as pea crabs. They actually live the-year-round in the mussel and lay their eggs in their host but don't seem to harm it. The crab larvae will eventually leave the mussel. It won't feed on the latter.

Firebomb 14

VANCOUVER (CP) - Seven persons escaped injury early today when a Molotov cocktail exploded in a central Vancouver house.

It was the 14th firebomb attack here in recent weeks, but the first against a residence.

Inside the home were a mother, her three children and three tenants.

FIERCE THREE-DAY BATTLE

Viets Fight in China

Times News Services

Vietnam has struck back at China, sending forces 24 kilometres deep into Chinese territory, but the attack has been repulsed, the official Chinese Hsinhua News Agency reported today.

The news agency said Chinese and Vietnamese forces fought for three days in the Ninming area of the Kwangsi Chuan autonomous region and the Chinese killed 68 Vietnamese troops and captured one.

This is the first time China has reported Vietnamese intrusions into its border provinces since Feb 17 when it launched its attacks into Vietnam.

The attack began last Friday when a battalion of Vietnamese troops attacked communes in Ningming, firing more than 200 shells, the agency said.

The Vietnamese burnt two villages and a large area of forestland, killing many Chinese civilians and damaging houses, the agency added.

At the height of the offensive, the Vietnamese occupied a six-kilometre stretch of highway and a hill, the agency said.

Earlier, Peking sources said the invading Chinese forces were under orders not to advance more than 50 kilometres from the border. They said fighting is being staged within a 20 kilometre radius from the frontier.

Chinese and Vietnamese forces also fought slogging battles across three northern mountain provinces today in stepped-up clashes. China claimed 17,000 Vietnamese casualties in the war, and said it had knocked out seven missile bases.

The Japanese news agency Kyodo reporting from Peking said China claimed it had disabled or destroyed seven missile bases.

Kyodo quoted official documents saying "several thousand" Vietnamese prisoners of war — the first China has reported taking — have been taken into Chinese territory.

The battles are now "heavier than before with large numbers of troops apparently involved on both ... sides," a U.S. State Department spokesman said in Washington Monday.

The spokesman said the Vietnamese "appear to be reinforcing units in the

Vandal Rash in City

Thieves and vandals hit nearly a dozen businesses in Victoria overnight and while little was taken, damage is reckoned in the thousands of dollars.

Plants and bushes were uprooted in the lobby of a building at 747 Fort and across the alley at 734 Broughton doors were smashed, desks opened and a safe damaged.

There were also break-ins at McGill and Orme at Fort and Richmond, Le Premier Restaurant at 506 Fort and Corner Confectionery at 501 Government.

Dave Patterson, office manager of the law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm, owners of the Broughton Street building, estimates about $3,000 damage was done to office furnishings.

He said thieves apparently picked the lock in the front door and then made their way through the first two floors of the building, entering the offices of Midland Dougherty, Monarch Life, Investor's Syndicate and several lawyers' offices.

"They hit every office in the building, except those on the third floor. They couldn't get to them because the elevator was locked," Patterson said.

Nothing, however, appeared to be taken.

"I think they were looking for cash only," he said. "But nothing of value is ever kept overnight in the building."

He said an unsuccessful attempt was made to jimmy open a safe in the back of Investor's Syndicate.

Police said the thieves went empty-handed in the other break-ins as well.

GNP Rose By 3.4% In 1978

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian economy grew by 3.4 per cent in 1978, up slightly from 2.7 per cent growth in 1977, Statistics Canada reported today.

The federal agency said Gross National Product (GNP), the value of all goods and services produced in the country, rose to $231.8 billion.

That was 10.3 per cent higher than in 1977 but real growth, after taking into account inflation, was only 3.4 per cent.

Although the GNP increase was higher than in 1977, it fell well short of Finance Minister Jean Chretien's prediction.

Statistics Canada said about half the increase in the country's total production was the result of an 8.5-per-cent real increase in exports, which "had a positive effect on profits and employment in export-oriented industries."

The effect of improved exports, however, was offset by a 4.1-per-cent increase in the volume of imports which rose despite an increase of 12.7 per cent in import prices.

Statistics Canada said real growth in the fourth quarter was at a sluggish annual rate of 1.8 per cent.

Begin Gives In, Will Meet Carter

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter today announced that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin would arrive in Washington on Thursday for talks aimed at revving up the idling Mideast peace negotiations.

After meeting Begin, he would then consider whether to ask Egyptian President Anwar Sadat or Egyptian Prime Minister Mustapha Khalil to join them, the president said.

The announcement came after what appeared to be a marked cooling-off between Washington and Tel Aviv.

The White House earlier expressed "grave concern" over Israel's decision not to send Begin to a Mideast summit meeting scheduled at Camp David this week which Sadat had refused to attend.

The refusal of both Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to meet at the request of President Carter means there will be no such "summit."

Although Carter had no immediate personal comment, White House officials were obviously concerned about the effect on peace prospects in the Middle East.

"We're in the process of making sure we fully understand what has taken place," said a White House official, noting that Begin had promised to communicate with Carter on the move.

"The initial reaction here was of grave concern about what this decision means to the peace process," the official said.

But Begin said he would be willing at any time to meet with Carter concerning relations between the United States and Israel.

Begin said it was evident to the cabinet that in the five days of minsterial level talks in Washington "no progress was made toward an Israeli-Egyptian agreement. On the contrary, a more extreme position was presented by the Egyptian delegation."

The cabinet voted 14-2 to reject the invitation temporarily because "it would be inappropriate for Begin to take part in the talks under the current conditions," the sources said.

The sources said the cabinet ministers were upset that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was not to participate in the meeting.

The cabinet decision was certain to anger Carter, who reportedly planned to convene the summit with Begin and Egyptian prime minister Mustapha Khalil as early as Thursday.

Begin said Khalil insisted on the adoption of the Egyptian proposals.

"Under these circumstances, the cabinet decided that the prime minister is not in a position to participate in the proposed meeting with Dr. Khalil," Begin said in a prepared statement.

The stunning Israeli decision came during a five-hour cabinet session.

Carter Asks Power To Ration Gasoline

Times News Services

President Carter has asked Congress for authority to order coupon-type gasoline rationing and three other mandatory conservation measures for use in severe energy emergencies, the Energy Department said today.

In addition to rationing of the kind last used during the Second World War, Carter's proposed standby measures to force fuel savings include weekend service station closings, temperature limits for public buildings and a ban on nonessential advertising lights and lighted store window displays.

Imposing all the steps short of rationing would save more than 500,000 barrels of oil a day, department analysts said.

Carter sent copies of his request to key members of Congress Monday but delayed public announcement of details until today to assure lawmakers got the first word. Formal transmission of the requests was scheduled for March 1, the first day both the House and Senate will be in session.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia announced today it will not raise oil prices during the first quarter of this year.

The Saudi announcement came one day after Kuwait told customers it was adding nine per cent to its current price of $13.35 a barrel, raising it to about $14.55 a barrel.

In Kuwait, U.S. warnings that it will use military force in the Persian Gulf region if necessary to protect Middle East oil supplies have provoked angry reaction.

Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah said he resents the statements, made Sunday by Defence Secretary Harold Brown and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

Hassan Nazih, the new director of the Iranian National Iranian Oil Co., said at a news conference today that Iran will sell its first exported oil next week on the spot market to the highest bidder and hopes to get $18 to $20 a barrel.

This would be $4.65 to $6.65 more than the current base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

"At this moment, there are several foreign tankers in Iranian waters ready to take on oil," said Nazih. "These are expected to dock within a few days."

The Saudi announcement also called for an urgent meeting of oil exporters and consumers "to regulate consumption and stabilize oil prices, to save the world from a possible economic relapse."

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter and traditionally has been a moderate in pricing decisions of OPEC.

Venezuela also has announced a price increase for several types of oil used primarily for powering factories and electrical generators, an increase that might mean a five-cent-a-gallon rise in the price.

ICBC PROFIT 'REALLY A LOSS'

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. would end the year with a loss of $15 million rather than a surplus of $22 million if the government subsidy was included in the final figures, an NDP MLA said today.

Dennis Cocke, the party's ICBC critic, said ICBC president Robbie Sherrell is earning his $80,000 annual salary by totalling confusing everyone with his projected profits.

Sherrell said Monday that ICBC had revenues of $366 million and paid out $344 million in claims and costs for a net surplus of $22 million.

Sherrell said the figures represent a turn around from last year's $8 million deficit.

But Cocke said the true revenues are $366 million in premiums plus $40 million in investment income (largely from the half billion dollars in claims reserves) for a total income of $406 million.

Expenditures include the $343 million in claims plus another $60 million in administrative costs.

This would result in the corporation ending the year $3 million in the black, but Cocke said the government is subsidizing ICBC by $18 million so the true overall loss would be $15 million this year.

Cocke was referring to the $181 million that the government gave ICBC three years ago.

But the next day ICBC loaned the money back to the provincial treasury at an interest rate of 10 per cent.

Since the taxpayer is paying that interest — $18 million per year — to ICBC that sum must be included in calculating ICBC profits or losses, Cocke said.

Steaks-to-Steel Price Probe Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — A special commission to investigate price increases for everything from steaks to steel and to order reductions in unjustified charges is needed to prevent even higher inflation rates, Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader said Monday.

He told reporters he would propose a Fair Prices Commission in a special Commons debate today. The commission would have few bureaucrats and would concentrate on keeping price changes in line with wages.

If price increases were not moderated, workers would start demanding higher contract settlements, he said.

Earlier in the Commons, Broadbent was assured by Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand that the government will investigate why flour prices have shot above levels expected when the government ended a bread subsidy at the end of 1978.

The NDP has asked the government to justify increases in many food prices. And it has asked it to look into rising costs of steel and lumber which are adding to the price of new houses.

Allmand said there was little Ottawa could do now that the Anti-Inflation Board was on the wane but that he would investigate.

At the same time, he accused Broadbent of asking questions on obscure topics and "aiming questions not for information but for emotion."

"Any fool can get up and ask a question in this House," Allmand said. It was harder to analyze the circumstances behind price rises.

Broadbent replied that it "would take a particular fool to give that answer." The minister should be honest with the public and admit "the government has no intention of doing anything about food prices."

That, Allmand said, was another facile suggestion.

Government agencies reported bullish food price increases of 21 per cent in 1978. Beef price increases started a stampede in other meat prices. The devalued dollar also pushed up the cost of imported fruit and vegetables. Food prices rose 1.9 per cent in January.

Broadbent said the government should also investigate why retail chicken prices have climbed 35 per cent in the last year while returns to farmers for birds have gone up only 12.5 per cent. It appeared to be classic case of middlemen profiteering at the expense of farmer and consumer.

Allmand said the national marketing boards for chickens and turkeys are expected to increase production to help ease price increases. But Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said there now is more poultry available than there was at the start of 1978.

RETURN TO THE LAND
We have four 5-acre mini farm lots in central Saanich, beautifully located between Brentwood village and the Butchart gardens. These are not rock and trees but cleared farm land with paved road, water, power and telephone. Use the equity in your present home and build your new home on this acreage. As time and money permits, you can add the tennis court, pool, hobby sheds, or you can have a vegetable garden, fruit trees, a horse, etc. If you have been thinking about the country, phone me regarding these properties.
